Study Reveals Home Freezers Please Owners

Convenience outweighs cost when it comes to freezer ownership, according to a recent survey cited by Bernice Strawn, Extension home management and equipment specialist at Oregon State university.

Of the 482 families included in the study, none indicated concern about the costs of freezing. Miss Strawn points out that freezing does cost money, but consumers who use their freezer more fully can cut the cost per pound of frozen foods.

The total annual cost of home freezing was found to average between $51 and $53, the latter figure applying to farm families.

These costs take into account depreciation on the equipment, repairs and electricity.

Packaging costs were also included. Farm families spent an average of $3.94 and urban families $3.03 a year for cartons, plastic bags, wraps and other supplies.

A turnover of 2 1/2 times the capacity of the freezer each year may be expected, Miss Strawn says. This would mean the cost per pound of storing frozen food would be approximately 4 to 5 cents. However, if there is no regular turnover the cost of freezing and storing food might run as high as 10 to 12 cents per pound.

Ten cents may not seem unreasonable when added to the price of a one-pound porterhouse steak. But it is a considerable amount when added to the cost of a one-pound loaf of bread, the Extension specialist notes.

"The results of this study indicate that some freezer owners might benefit by keeping freezer inventory records and planning to use food within definite time periods," suggests Miss Strawn.

Bishop took part in a June 3 evening piano recital of Mrs. Denman's students at the Adrian school.

Mrs. Frank Shelton of Nyssa visited May 29 with Mrs. Chet Smith.

Leonard Clary and Leona of Grants Pass spent several days visiting his sister, Mrs. Darrell English and other relatives nearby.

It's Your Law!

ASSUMING A LOAN

You can give some of your rights to other people, like the right to collect a bill owed to you. But it's different with your duties. You need your creditor's OK to assign your debts to another.

You can sell what you own, all right, but you can't shake a debt to your seller merely by getting somebody else to promise to pay it for you. Your creditor has something to say about who takes over your obligations.

When your cousin, say, borrows money from you and promises to pay it back, he can't get out of it simply by persuading his neighbor to say he will pay you for him. You must agree to let your cousin off the hook, and it takes a written contract to relieve him of the debt.

Another example: Suppose you bought Smith's house on time for $15,000 and had paid off $5,000. With $10,000 left to pay, Jones buys it from you. How do you arrange it?

To save the cost of a new loan Jones would probably like to assume the $10,000 debt, give you your $5,000 equity, and then pay Smith your $10,000 debt.

Should you do it? Not unless Jones is a good risk.

If he skipped town, you, yes, you, would be left holding the bag. Your agreement to have Jones pay the balance does not bind Smith. He can hold you to your original deal. Pay up the $10,000.

So don't let someone "assume" your loan unless your lender will agree to let you off the hook, or unless you are willing to risk holding the sack. Just because your buyer agreed to "assume" your obligation, doesn't absolve you.

(Oregon lawyers offer this column as a public service. No person should apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is completely advised of the facts involved. Even a slight variance in fact may change the application of the law.)
