Graphoanalyst Discusses Bum-Check Business

BY ELLEN JONES

"How is it possible that the forged- and bum-check business can be so profitable?" This was the question asked by members of the Idaho chapter of the International Graphoanalysis society during an all-day meeting held June 8 at the Holiday Inn in Boise.

The speaker had just stated that over $2 billion was lost to merchants in the United States each year. That boils down to just over $1,500 per minute, around the clock.

There were several answers to the question including fear of losing a sale because the customer might feel insulted if asked for identification or references; not taking time to learn about methods of forgery; being too busy to check details.

Some of the details which escape notice of business people who must cash checks are misspelled words, illegible writing, rubber - stamped company names, doctored-up counter checks, postdated checks, no date or check number, and erasures.

Part of the training received by graphoanalysts is in the field of questioned and forged documents. A seminar in forensic graphoanalysis, offered by the International Graphoanalysis Society July 21-27 in Chicago, will be attended by members from Idaho and Eastern Oregon.

Next state meeting will be Sept. 21 in Boise, with location to be announced later.
