Summary Shows Increase In OSU Woman Students

A dramatic increase in the number and ratio of women students at Oregon State University is shown in enrollment summaries prepared by the Registrar's Office.

Twenty years ago, the male-female ratio at OSU was 3.36 men to every woman on campus -- 5,713 to 1,715.

Last year's male-female ratio was 1.82 to 1 with 8,627 men and 4,731 women registered.

More of the same is seen for the future by university officials. The report of new Oregon freshmen admitted to date for this fall shows 1,584 men and 1,330 women. The totals for freshmen coming to OSU from other states are heavily in favor of the men, however, 729 to 297.

The increasing women's enrollment is credited only partly to a national trend, it was noted.

OSU's School of Humanities and Social Sciences, established in 1959, has drawn especially large numbers of women students, and increases have been sizeable and steady in the Schools of Education and Home Economics. Last year's totals showed 920 coeds in Humanities and Social Sciences; 1,390 in Education; and 852 in Home Economics.

But the Schools of Science, Pharmacy, Engineering, Business and Technology and Agriculture are enrolling more coeds all the time too now.

The School of Science had 574 undergraduate women majors last year; Pharmacy, 137; Business and Technology, 447; Agriculture, 51; and Engineering, 15. There were 324 women working for advanced degrees, in addition.

And the School of Forestry, which went years without women majors, can be included now also. Six coeds have been admitted to date as entering freshmen in forestry this fall.
