PCA Members Now Own Spokane Credit Bank; Pay Off Federal Loan

When the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Spokane opens its doors for business on January 2, 1969, it will be entirely owned by the 21,625 stockholders and patrons who discount with the Bank, according to Carl H. Nieberg, President.

Local Students On Dean's List For Fall Term

While this is the time of year when many students must explain to their parents about the grades earned during fall term, others receive plaudits by earning recognition by being placed on the Dean's List.

PERFECT GRADES

Earning perfect 4.00 or all A grades for fall term are: Kathryn Appleton, Ontario; Noel Council, New Plymouth; Larry Kreager, Nyssa; Anne Matthews, New Plymouth; Barbara Townley, Vale; Kristie Wrenn, Ontario.

Eighty-three scholars make up the fall term 1969 Dean's List. Among them are these from the Nyssa-Adrian area: Freda Astoreca, Linda Ballou, Jimmy W. Brewer, Larry Kreager, Delphene L. Meier, Gary Moss, Norma Nelson, Dirk Sipes and Ronald H. Strasser.

able funds largely by monthly sales of debentures in the private money markets of the nation. These debentures carry no Government guarantee, but have long been a favorite security of discerning investors because of the financial strength, the long record of integrity, and the high quality of the collateral of Credit Banks and PCAs nationally.

This is the final step taken by farmers and ranchers of the Northwest to pay back the capital originally invested by the U. S. Government in the three Farm Credit Banks of Spokane -- the Federal Land Bank, the Bank of Cooperatives, and now the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Spokane. Including the PCAs, farmer-ownership of the net worth in the Spokane Farm Credit Banks exceeds $140 million.

Nieberg concluded with high praise for the farmers and ranchers who, at substantial sacrifice to themselves, determined to become sole owners of their own financing system.

OSU Specialist Gives Pointers On Cooking Meat

Meat is a relatively expensive item in the family food budget. So buy it wisely, care for it properly, conserve the nutrients, and develop the flavor, recommends Marie Tribble, Oregon State University's extension food and nutrition specialist.

Because of the variety of kinds and cuts of meat available, the shopper can also find meats that sell in a broad price range, Miss Tribble points out. Saving money on these protein foods, involves becoming familiar with different ways of using meats as well as skill in selecting them at the meat counter.

Miss Tribble lists some ways to stretch that "protein" dollar: Know how many servings you can get out of a pound of meat. If it has much bone, connective tissue and fat, count on one-half to one serving per pound. If bone, connective tissue and fat are present in medium quantity, plan one-third to one-half pound per serving. Cuts with no bone, little connective tissue and fat will provide a serving from one-fifth to a quarter of a pound.

Cook meat to desired doneness at low temperature to prevent shrinkage. Extend meat with less costly protein such as cheese and beans.

Take advantage of drippings by making gravy for extenders such as biscuits, dressing, or dumplings. Add variety with less expensive protein foods such as fresh, frozen, and canned fish, liver, heart, eggs and beans.

Buy fresh, good-quality food from a clean, well-managed market. Don't waste money on food that won't be enjoyed or eaten.

Store fresh meat unwrapped in the coldest part of your refrigerator. Use variety meats, chicken, fish, and ground meat within a day after purchase.

Store cooled cooked meat and fish closely covered in your refrigerator. Plan to use within two or three days.

A wife who deserves much credit usually appreciates cash just the same.

FLETCHER'S CORRAL

BY ROGER FLETCHER Malheur County Agent

A 4-H'ER IS DOG'S BEST FRIEND

A dog in a 4-H household is expected to shape up, walk right and obey its master. According to hundreds of young dog fanciers throughout Oregon, the canine member of the family does just that.

This does not come about without considerable effort, however, both on the part of the dog and owner. The owner belongs to a 4-H club and is enrolled in the National 4-H Dog Care and Training program. He or she is between 9 and 19 years of age, and has accepted complete responsibility for the welfare and training of the animal.

The Cooperative Extension Service is introducing the 4-H Dog Project to Malheur County youth this year. It will provide a splendid opportunity for boys and girls to understand and appreciate animals, particularly those who do not live on farms. Moreover, the dog project provides the educational tool to develop initiative, dependability, pride of ownership and leadership among youngsters who may not have the opportunity to care for other animals.

If there is not a family pet available, then the 4-H'er enrolled in this project has the thrill of choosing his own dog. Learning about canine health, disposition, daily care are important factors in the project, to say nothing of the fun and satisfaction which are products of their participation.

The 4-H Dog Program is an outstanding project worth youthful attention. Parents interested in enrolling their children in 4-H, or who would like to volunteer as a leader of a 4-H Dog Club, should contact me at the County Extension Office in Ontario (889-9129).

TAX CONCESSIONS QUESTIONABLE BAIT Marion D. Thomas, Oregon State University Extension Public Affairs Specialist says that "widely - advocated tax concessions may be useful lures when angling for new industries, but they seem to hook few fish." Studies relating economic growth and tax levels have produced some conflicting conclusions. Part of these conflicts appear to be due to differences in design of the studies. Studies based on interviews with company officials show that most firms rank taxes below raw materials, public services, markets, transportation, and amount and quality of available labor when they are deciding where to locate new facilities. Locations with tax saving possibilities are seldom important enough to determine site selection by existing firms. For firms that re-locate, tax savings were a small part of total costs. Yet, many advocates of tax concessions remain unconvinced. Some think more studies are needed. Others believe that public financing is a better inducement than tax commissions. This, they note however, has been studied even less than tax concessions. Existing studies do indicate that local public financing helps the community most when it goes to small and medium size firms. Of course, there is much more to economic development than tax concessions and special financing. The significance of any one factor is difficult to evaluate, but studies suggest some second and third looks at devices for luring industries to Oregon communities.
