THE WINNER!
Will you remember?
The coldest winter in the Northwest in 18 years! And what heating energy was most dependable during those trying days? Natural gas . . . the fuel that arrived in this corner of the nation just 12 years ago.
Flameless heat did not measure up. When the temperature went "way down and stayed there day after day in late December and most of January, the warmest homes and buildings were those heated with natural gas.
Will you remember this? Or will you be lulled into complacency because a lovely Northwest summer is probably just around the corner?
Next winter you may wish you had remembered. Better still, do it now—switch to natural gas and be sure. It's not too late to have the economical luxury of natural gas heat in your home or your business for the balance of this winter. Plan now to have the heat that sees you through the tough times. Plan now for natural gas.
