Inflation Deluxe

The House of Representatives, Monday, voted by a narrow margin to retain the surtax for another year. This is considered necessary to fight inflation - the erosion of your dollar. This along with high interest rates are apparently not enough to stop it. Government spending must be slowed in every way possible, as well as personal, for luxuries.

Many of the legislators casting votes on the issue have known nothing but inflationary conditions that started in the 1930's - at the end of a long depression.

For those who think a little inflation each year is not bad they should check back to the 1920's and study the history of Germany following World War I. Such would show that the longer it continues the faster it grows and the more difficult to slow down or stop.

City Manager Fred Koch found the papers (shown below) in the possessions of his father, a citizen of Germany in 1923. The top one is a charge slip from a large department store in Hamburg, Germany. The items covers soap and some wearing apparel that would have cost about $5 - $6 American money at that time.

The cost was 18 billion, 400 million marks. (The mark today is worth in the neighborhood of 25¢). The bottom photo is a bill of 100 million marks - so it would have taken 18,400 of these to pay for the items at that time.

We can see why Koch has little patience with those people who think inflation is not a big worry and say, "It couldn't happen here."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

1204 Union Bend, Oregon

Gentlemen:

After 27 years the Adrian class of 1942 is widely scattered, with no member of the class still residing in Adrian. A few of us decided that we would like to get together when a member of our class, Harold Kurtz, a missionary to Africa, will be in Adrian.

Having no one there to do the leg work in assembling addresses, we would appreciate your printing the enclosed notice to aid us in this task.

Thank you for your attention. Sincerely, -Irma L. Over.

RECEIVES DEGREE

Lynn (Jackson) Wortendyke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Jackson of Nyssa, received her Bachelor of Science degree in Biology at spring exercises at Portland State university. She is now living in Portland with her husband and son, and is currently working towards certification as a medical technologist at the University of Oregon Medical School, which she expects to complete this September.
