

SOUTHWESTERN IDAHO DEVELOPMENT GROUP FAVORS USE OF SNAKE

Binning's group has endorsed Middle Snake development by the two power groups, which propose cooperative construction of Low Mountain Sheep and Pleasant Valley Dams and have initiated a bold new concept for recreational use of the area.

The association has pointed out in a resolution submitted to the U.S. Senate's water and power resources subcommittee that revenues to the State of Idaho from the development would make "possible the building of all portions of the South west Idaho Water Project now in spite of a scarcity of federal funds."

Binning said the benefits for "all Idahoans" would result from the offer made by Idaho Power Company for the Idaho Water Resource Board to participate in the Middle Snake development.

The utility, which now has a share in the proposed hydroelectric-recreation development, has proposed that the board finance its portion of the facilities and be repaid in annual payments equaling what it would have cost Idaho Power to build them itself.

With its net revenue from the payments, the board could finance irrigation development and thus reduce its dependence on federal reclamation funds.

Binning, calling the cooperative proposal "a golden opportunity that may never knock on Idaho's door again," listed the major benefits to the state and its people as follows:

1. Opening of a vast, "unsurpassed" scenic area for the "everlasting enjoyment of all" - from the casual recreationist with his camper, boat, wife and three kids on the one hand to the ardent sportsman with his backpack on the other.

2. New tax revenues for education, road construction and maintenance, water development and pollution-control programs and other public services.

3. New money for reclamation projects supporting hundreds of families on the farm and in related enterprises.

4. New payrolls for workers constructing the Middle Snake development and "forever after" for permanent operating personnel after its completion.

5. Safeguarding of Idaho water for use by and for Idaho citizens.

6. A new source of electric energy to pace Idaho progress.

Binning, calling for "concerted action" by Idaho citizens in support of Middle Snake River development, said "only the very shortsighted can fail to see the signs on every hand pointing to continued growth of Idaho's economy."

"Unless this development is undertaken soon, its benefits for all Idahoans will be forever lost," Binning declared.

SUNRIVER OPENS SECOND NINE HOLES

Sunriver's second nine holes opened May 15, giving the resort Central Oregon's first 18-hole golf course, announced Verne Perry Jr., resident PGA professional. It is a 7,110-yard championship course that ranks with the finest in the West. The golf course was designed by Fred Federspiel, Lake Oswego, Oregon.

The course is open to the public. Sunriver Resort is located 15 miles south of Bend. The new nine is 3,500 yards for championship play; 3,356 for men's, and 3,142 for ladies. Greens and tees are extra large so that markers and pins can be moved to adapt to championship or regular play. No. 10 is the longest hole at 579 yards, a par 5.

The new back nine would be rated a bit tougher than the front nine, since fairways are narrower. A red cinder cart path takes golfers around the entire 18, leading over picturesque bridges and around lagoons. Scenery is spectacular with white-capped mountains looming nearby, pine trees and the Deschutes River adjacent to the course.

Weather is consistently sunny, averaging 265 days of sunshine a year. Electric carts and full rental equipment are available. Perry and his staff are experienced tournament operators. Golf packages are available. Starting times are accepted by phone.
