NEW RECORD IN TRAFFIC DEATHS IN OREGON FOR 1970

Unless some Oregon drivers do a much better job of driving during the last half of 1970 than they did during the first half of the year, Oregon will tie or exceed the traffic death record set in 1969.

Chester W. Ott, Administrator of the Motor Vehicles Division, said Wednesday that 314 fatalities were reported to the Division during the first half of 1970. Fifty-eight were killed in June, 11 below that month last year.

The six-month figure equalled the toll for the same period last year, and the state is now entering the most dangerous period of the year from the standpoint of number of people killed in highway crashes. Last year, more than 60 deaths were reported each month, except September, during the last half of the year.

Ott said he is sickened when he reads some of the fatal accident reports filed with the Motor Vehicles Division. Most fatal crashes simply would not occur, he said, if drivers had been exercising common sense and obeying traffic laws.

"A great deal of attention has been paid in recent years to the need to improve vehicle and highway design but, in the final analysis, drivers determine how safely vehicles and highways are used," Ott said.

"Our records indicate that most drivers in fatal accidents have a far greater number of prior accidents and violations on their records than the average Oregon driver," he said.

Study of 596 drivers involved in last year's fatal crashes showed that together they had accumulated more than 1400 accidents and nearly 2,600 traffic convictions on their records.

The study showed that these drivers had received 164 letters, 69 interviews and 230 license suspensions as a part of the agency's driver improvement program, but in their cases efforts to get them to improve their driving failed, he said.

With records such as many of them had, a fatal accident at some point in their driving careers was almost predictable, Ott concluded.

Mrs. W.C. Van DeWater of Big Bend and Mrs. Olive Miller of Caldwell were Thursday visitors of Mrs. Dale Witt.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Begeman and Mr. and Mrs. W.C. Van DeWater of Big Bend were dinner guests of Mrs. Dale Witt July 4.

Mrs. Marie Moore attended a July 4 picnic at the K.I. Peterson home in Adrian.

Kenneth Fenn and family of Kent, Wash., spent 2 weeks visiting his mother, Mrs. Carl Fenn. They left Monday for Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Simpson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Simpson and family, Mrs. Howard Fenn and children, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Savage and family, and Mrs. Carl Fenn attended the July 4 pot luck picnic at the home of Mrs. Jeanie Fenn and daughters in Ontario.

STAMPEDE HONORS AIR FORCE MEN

Special seating arrangements have been made for Mountain Home Air Force Base personnel attending the Snake River Stampede in Nampa on the second night performance of the annual rodeo, according to Gary Doorn, ticket chairman of the event.

"There will be special tickets available to members of the Air Force Base, but they must be purchased at the Stampede ticket purchasing facilities at the Mountain Home Air Force Base. It has always been the policy of the Stampede to set aside a section of seats for the Men in Blue. This year a reserved section will be made available on the night of July 15", according to Doorn.

He continued, "Air Base Night tickets will not be available at the Stampede grounds or at any of the other ticket booths in the valley. The only location they will be sold is at the Mountain Home Air Force Base."

The stars of the 1970 Snake River Stampede are Doc and Festus of the television series, "Gunsmoke". The Stampede gets underway in Nampa, July 14, for a five night run, ending on July 18, with the crowning of next year's queen and naming the all-around champion cowboy.
