There's a unique new education organization in Oregon.

It goes by the name of IPAR, its purpose is to "Educate for Leadership." And it's doing an effective job of telling young people what this nation, its economic system and its problems are really all about.

IPAR stands for the Institute for Public Affairs Research, Inc. It's the brainchild of current President and Founder Edward A. Prentice, a second-generation Portlandplywood and woodworking machinery manufacturer, who has long been concerned with the so-called communication generation gap.

After participating at his own expense in the nationwide Inter-collegiate Studies Institute, Prentice began discussing formation of an Oregon movement that would enlist financial backing and competent speakers from the state's business, industrial and professional communities.

The only idea behind the plan was to communicate face-to-face on a classroom level with young people about fundamental and current issues about which youth might be confused or uninformed.

"I guess we wanted a chance to explain in a practical manner just what makes the economic world go around," he said. "And to impress on high school students, for instance, that things don't necessarily get changed simply by wishing, by waving a wand or even by passing a law."

Prentice's plan was quickly embraced by a broad-based, non-partisan group that includes both labor and management, Democrats and Republicans. Directors and advisors include AFL-CIO's Thomas Scanlon and Georgia-Pacific's William J. Moshofsky, former Democrat Congressman Robert B. Duncan and Republican Secretary of State Clay Myers.

It works closely with the Oregon State Bar, Associated Oregon Industries, Portland Chamber of Commerce and the Oregon Medical Association.

Officially launched in January of this year, IPAR received immediate favorable reaction from Portland metropolitan area educators and school administrators. More than 100 requests for speakers to appear before high school groups were fulfilled by the end of the school year. An estimated 30,000 high school students heard one or more IPAR speakers.

Speakers addressed and participated in open question-and-answer sessions with audiences averaging 300 students, usually representing a combination of high school social problems classes. Topics were current and ranged from the environment and drug abuse to poverty and law enforcement.

Success of the program in its first half-year is apparent in staff growth, which has expanded from one to five fulltime people in that first six months.

"IPAR is more than a speakers' bureau, however," explained Executive Secretary David N. Talbot. "We also offer 'package' assembly programs, films, in-depth study material and an annual essay contest."

Initial essay competition explored the 19-year-old vote question defeated during the May Primary Election. Two $500 scholarships were awarded winners of pro and con positions.

IPAR now is involved in two additional projects, training speakers for an expanded statewide program during the coming school year and sponsorship of the environmental "Un-Conference" for students, faculty, businessmen, professional people and government officials Sept. 14-17 at Canby.

And this fall IPAR speakers will be available for college as well as high school engagements. Requests should be addressed to IPAR, P.O. Box 4384, Portland 97208.

"Young people naturally question the principles of the society in which they live," said Founder Prentice. "Alienation often runs deep and frustration becomes rampant if their education is isolated from the rest of the community."

"Through IPAR we're eliminating the isolation and by give-and-take communication helping to close the gap between the young and curious and the older and experienced."

Special Party Set for Miss Malheur Girls

A Miss Malheur County Peppi party will be held for interested girls in the Carriage House in Ontario Saturday.

To talk with eligible girls will be Miss La Grande of 1969, Toni Walker, and Nyssa's 1968 Miss Malheur County, Linda Ballou Ady. Mrs. Lowell Howard, regional chairman of the Miss Oregon Pageant, will also be present to answer any questions interested girls may have concerning this year's county pageant.

The party, with refreshments provided, will be held from 2-5 p.m. Saturday. The pageant is Aug. 15.

To be eligible for the Miss Malheur show, a girl must be a high school graduate between the ages of 18 and 27, must be a Malheur resident, and have never been married.

Entry forms may be obtained at community newspapers, the Carriage House, and the First National Bank, Ontario.

It's Your Law!

"NEW" SAXOPHONE

The gleaming row of saxophones greeted Sam's eye as he entered the music store.

"Boy, that's a nice looking one there," he commented to the salesman. "In fact it's just the brand name the music teacher recommended to me. My son will really like this. It is an alto saxophone, isn't it?"

"Oh, yes," the salesman said. "It has a nice case and all the accessories that go with it, too. It's $350. A real good buy."

"I'll take it," Sam replied. A week later Sam returned back into the store, saxophone in hand.

"This is a used instrument. I thought it was new. I want my money back," Sam demanded.

"Sorry, all sales are final. Anyway you didn't ask for a new one--or whether this one was used. You picked it out," the salesman replied.

Sam sued the store for the return on his money, claiming misrepresentation. Could Sam get his money back?

Under these circumstances, courts generally rule in Sam's favor. Sam was entitled to assume description of the saxophone. When placed in with the new instruments, the salesman owed a duty to Sam to tell him it was "like new" or "reconditioned" or "used."

The fact the customer doesn't ask about the "new" or "used" aspect of the item is no real defense.

Generally, courts have held that if something is "new" it must never have been used, not "reconditioned," or "like new."

Similarly, if the saxophone had turned out to be a tenor saxophone, even though new, Sam could recover his money, because of the salesman's express material misrepresentation.

Song Of Days Gone By

The following was submitted by Mrs. Harold Glascock.

Remember when HIPPIE meant big in the hips, And a TRIP involved travel in cars, planes and ships? When POT was a vessel for cooking things in, And HOOKED was what Grandmother's rug might have been?

When FIX was a verb that meant mend or repair, And BE-IN meant simply existing somewhere? When NEAT meant well organized, tidy and clean, And GRASS was a groundcover, normally green? When lights and not people were SWITCHED ON and OFF,

And the PILL might have been what you took for a cough? When CAMP meant to quarter outdoors in a tent, And POP was what the weasel went?

When GROOVY meant furrowed with channels and hollows, And BIRDS were winged creatures, like robins and swallows? When FUZZ was a substance that's fluffy like lint, And BREAD came from bakeries, not from a mint?

When SQUARE meant a 90-degree angled form, And COOL was a temperature not quite warm? When ROLL meant a bun and ROCK was a stone, And HANG-UP was something you did to a phone?

When CHICKEN meant poultry, and BAG meant a sack. And JUNK trashy cast-offs and old bric-a-bac? When JAM was preserves that you spread on your bread, And CRAZY meant balmy, not right in the head?

When CAT was a feline, a kitten grown-up, And TEA was a liquid you drank from a cup? When SWINGER was someone who played in a swing, And a PAD was a soft sort of cushiony thing?

And a man couldn't sue you for calling him GAY? When DIG meant to shovel and spade in the dirt, And TOUGH described meat too unyielding to chew, And MAKING A SCENE was a rude thing to do?

Words once so sensible, sober and serious Are making the FREAK SCENE like PSYCHEDELIRIOUS. It's GROOVY, MAN, GROOVY, but English it's not; Methinks the language has gone straight to POT!
