Work Smarter - Not Harder

By Bernice Strawn OSU Extension Specialist

If kindergarten youngsters get glue on their clothes during school activities, be sure to treat the stains before washing. For airplane glue or household cement, sponge clean with acetone. If the fabric is Acetate, Arnel, Dynel or Verel, use amyl acetate. You can get these solutions at a drug store.

For dried plastic glue stains, soak in hot vinegar or hot 10 per cent acetic acid. Keep near boiling point until stain is removed. This may take 15 minutes or longer. Of course, not all fabrics will take these high temperatures. Also, some types of glue cannot be removed after they have hardened.

WHAT'S POLLUTION GOT TO DO WITH YOUR CLOTHES? A great deal--especially when it comes to colors fading and fibers deteriorating. Blues may fade and white fabrics discolor due to polluted air.

Manufacturers are working to improve the situation as much as possible through research for new fibers and finishes that resist the pollutants in the air. You can contribute by reporting to the manufacturer examples of uneven shade changes in garments that have been stored for long periods. Changes in color of permanent press items should be noted, as well as loss of strength in any fabric.

Letting down hems to keep up with fashion? Elaine Carlson, Oregon State University Extension Clothing Specialist, suggests facing the hem of straight skirts with nylon tulle. She recommends tulle instead of nylon net because it's softer and more pliable. Compared with solid colored fabrics which are often used for facings, tulle had the added advantage of being less noticeable.

Two of three layers of tulle are recommended. Heavier fabrics need the triple thickness. Wide lace may be used but it may not be as pliable as tulle and is more expensive.

"It won't happen to me." That's what a lot of people think about the danger of fires. Still, every day in this country, fires destroy 1495 homes, 196 apartments, 26 schools and college buildings, 10 churches, 22 hospitals and nursing homes, 111 farm buildings, 219 stores, restaurants and office buildings. This information comes from the National Safety Council.

Human carelessness or failure to observe basic safety precautions are the most common causes of fires. Be sure your family is briefed on what to do in case of a home fire.

The finish on wood furniture may be damaged by some rubber and vinyl products. The bases of lamps, telephones, radio and rubber mats should be separated from the wood finish by felt pads. For more information on care of wood finishes, ask your county Extension agent for a free fact sheet on this subject written by Mrs. Brown.

Braid is fashionable this year. Unless the label says that the shrinkage is controlled, home sewers are cautioned to pre-shrink all washable braids and trimmings used on garments you plan to wash.

This is a good idea, too, for any clothing you intend to have dry cleaned. Some braids have been known to shrink as much as two inches per yard.
