

There's good news for hunters, fishermen and other visitors to the T.E. Roach Hells Canyon development. Idaho Power Company has finished installing a modern concrete deck on its bridge across the Snake River below Brownlee Dam and the span once again is open to traffic. The new deck, its roadway paved with asphalt, replaces the bridge's original timber surface and includes a fenced walkway for pedestrians and fishermen on its downstream side at right. During the company's $180,000 modernization project, traffic was detoured across the top of the dam. Brownlee Bridge is one of two Snake River spans Idaho Power built as part of the Hells Canyon development. The other, located below Oxbow Dam, connects with a surfaced highway on the Idaho side of the river that the company also constructed to provide the only access into the heart of Hells Canyon.

The Auxiliary charges 20% and absorbs the sales tax to sell any used ski equipment, clothes and other sports equipment.

Main delivery day will be the 5th from 1 to 6 p.m., but items will also be accepted on the other three days.

Selling hours on the 6th and 7th will be from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Sunday, from 1 to 6 p.m.

All equipment that isn't sold by Sunday evening must be picked up then, or it will be donated to charitable organizations. All proceeds will be donated to the new pediatric ward at the hospital.

If your preschool age child is 3 years old, he isn't too young to have his first eye examination. In fact, the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness advises that children's eyes be examined first by the time they are four, because the critical period for successful treatment of certain vision disorders is the years before age six.
