WINTER WATERFOWL INVENTORY COMPLETE

Although cold weather and freezeup in some areas of Oregon caused many waterfowl to migrate south, more ducks and geese wintered over in the state this year than was recorded a year ago, according to the final count of migratory birds made in the annual January inventory.

The total waterfowl count was 485,400 birds, just over 9 percent more than the 442,800 tallied the previous winter. The count was made on all major marshland areas of the state as well as several major streams on which the birds concentrate.

The duck tally was 364,600, a considerable increase over the 311,000 recorded a year ago. Of these, more than 174,900 were mallards. Pintails totaled over 72,200 while widgeon totaled over 55,000. Eighteen species
