Although the majority of firms offering these plans are legitimate, a few use unethical practices. These plans usually offer a freezer plus an agreed-upon amount of frozen food. Check prices of comparable freezers at local appliance dealers. Also check into the price, types and quality of food to be supplied. Read all of the contract and ask questions before you sign. The Federal Trade Commission reports several types of deceptive practices regarding claims on savings, quality and quantity of food provided.

What We Have That Kings Didn't Have In The 1800's

Editor's Note: This composition was written by Bill Calhoun, a member of Mr. Irl Nolen's 8th grade Language Arts class. WHAT WE HAVE THAT KINGS DIDN'T IN THE 1800'S If the kings of the 1800's could have foreseen the world as it is today, they would surely have called it an age of magic and witchcraft. They would feel that the Gods were in command and that some great evil would soon destroy their world. Everyone knows that birds and kites are all that soar across the sky. The gigantic iron birds, our modern age jets, that travel faster than sound are an evil omen and will surely bring destruction. Trains, monstrous caterpillars, shake the ground as they speed noisily across the land on thin black lines lying on the ground or suspended on stilts. And such a variety of cars and trucks. They are constantly swarming across the countryside like a hoard of gigantic insects coming to devour everything in their path. The never ending black threads that seem to stitch the land together buzz mysteriously. This must be the Gods talking to one another. But the modern man speaks into a number of oddly shaped boxes and his voice is carried across the same noisy threads, for any distance he desires. What mystery is in these threads that a man can touch a button on a wall or on an object called a lamp and fill a room with bright light? The forces of witchcraft are everywhere; no one can escape them. Even in his home a man is not safe. Has not witchcraft disposed of a man's house-servants? Where there were servants there are now boxes of all sizes and descriptions that perform untold tasks. These magical boxes wash and dry one's clothes; refrigerators keep food from spoiling; freezers preserve food for lengthy periods of time. A man can enjoy the summer delicacies in the middle of winter. Appliances, blenders, mixers, coffee-pots, radios, clocks, etc., are what modern man calls the forces of witchcraft that abound in his home and he feels that his life would be miserable without them. It is as if the Gods were telling the modern man how to live his life. Don't the people of today devote untold hours attentively listening to a box? The forces of this box, television, have the appearance of man and behave as man; but, they can only be seen and not touched; and heard, but not talked to. These forces make man laugh and cry and give him cause for great emotional stress. No one but the Gods can behave in such a manner and affect man in so many ways. The Gods are kind to man and treat him as though he were a king. The necessities of a comfortable existence are at his fingertips. Turn a knob and water, both hot and cold, gushes from the wall or sprays down from above one's head. It is not often that man goes cold for his home is filled by a blanket of warmth. All manner of witchcraft has made man's visit on this earth comfortable and enjoyable. Man has become content and careless, taking his surroundings for granted. Now it is time for the evil forces to invade the earth. Evil forces in the form of pollution, taking over the clean fresh air that we breathe, and the cool, clear water of our lakes, rivers and streams. Perhaps the kings of the 1800's wouldn't have been wrong in seeing destructive forces at work destroying the world of modern man in his age of magic and witchcraft.

WORK SMARTER - NOT HARDER

What is meant by U.S. No. 1 Grade Potatoes? U.S. grades were not established for consumers but to enable wholesale buyers to bargain across country and know about a specific quality of the product. Don't think you're being cheated if you find U.S. No. 1 potatoes are not uniform in size--the standard permits variations. The U.S. No. 1 standard allows for some defects. In a 100-pound bag, up to six pounds of potatoes may have external defects. Up to five pounds may have internal defects. Some damage may occur between the time of grading and when potatoes finally reach the store or consumer.

SPEECH AND HEARING CLINICS SCHEDULED

The Malheur County School office is sponsoring a series of Speech and Hearing Clinics for all children who will be entering the first grade next fall. Much can be done to improve a child's faulty speech habits before entering school if parents are advised of some basic procedures and precautions and are interested in following professional suggestions. Miss Mary Koep of the Malheur County School office has a Master's degree from the University of Oregon in Speech Therapy and her students have shown a high degree of improvement. She has been employed by the Malheur County Intermediate Education District for five years. The series of three clinics are scheduled for 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and are as follows: Saturday, February 20, for Ontario and Annex area, meet-
