FFA Stresses Constructive Involvement For The Future Of America And A Stronger Agriculture

The trend to youth involvement in solving the many problems our nation faces is evident in our community.

This year FFA members across the nation are emphasizing constructive involvement in programs to improve agriculture and to make their communities better places in which to live and work.

This week over 450,000 FFA members in 9,000 chapters all across the nation are celebrating FFA WEEK with the theme "Involved In America's Future." Because FFA members realize they have a stake in America's future they are working to become more constructively involved today.

As students in high school vocational agriculture programs, FFA members are involved in learning modern agricultural production and business techniques. Their special agricultural knowledge will be increasingly important as this nation's population increases to nearly 300 million in the next thirty years.

The term vocational agriculture usually brings to mind the study only of farming and the production of food and fiber. But today's students of vocational agriculture are involved in more than production agriculture. They are training for jobs as quality control technicians, farm equipment mechanic, horticulturists, agricultural marketing representatives, and agricultural transportation experts.

Their training is essential to provide the manpower to produce vital food supplies and other agricultural products and services where they are needed, when they are needed, and in a form consumers demand.

In addition to helping provide the nation's food supply, FFA members are involved in the preservation and wise use of America's natural resources. Today more than ever, FFA members all across the nation are involved in activities to improve the environment. The National FFA Foundation, Inc., provides incentive awards in fish and wild-life management, and many other agricultural areas.

FFA members are involved in being better citizens and leaders. Through their regular meetings, public speaking contests, parliamentary procedure activities as well as local, state, and national leadership development experiences FFA members learn to be active citizens. Now they are using their leadership training to become involved in FFA community action programs designed to help develop rural and urban communities into rewarding and challenging places in which to live and work.

The FFA was founded on principles of service to members and to the community through personal involvement. This year we salute FFA members on rededicating themselves to being "Involved In America's Future."

This year's Nyssa Chapter officers are Glen Gibson, President; Pete Morgan, Vice President; Lurelle Robbins, Secretary; Gary Kurtz, Treasurer; Dan Nichols, Reporter; and Kirk Cleaver, Sentinel. The assistant officers are Bob Holmes, Jack Joyce, Fred Child, Bill Holmes and David Robbins.

TVCC Presents Film "The Pawnbroker"

"The Pawnbroker," the third in Treasure Valley Community College's great film series, will be shown Friday, February 26, at 8:00 p.m. in the Administration Building.

A dramatic and shattering United States film starring Rod Steiger, it is a grim portrait of a man who survived the hell of a Nazi concentration camp only to encounter further prejudice in New York's Harlem.

In America he relives his past as he reviews the same kind of dehumanization in America as he experienced in Nazi Germany. A loof and alone, in the end a young Puerto Rican breaches the wall of his bitterness in this compelling picture of our modern world.
