

Fawn That Came To Dinner

There's hardly a day passes when Camp Easter Seal on the southern Oregon coast is in session that deer fail to visit the camp, looking for a hand-out. A young camper is shown here as he feeds an early morning visitor. The camp is specially designed for physically handicapped children and young adults and last year was attended by 152 persons from all parts of Oregon.

Herb Sez ...

This United States is getting the weirdest outlook on crime and criminals and every day it's getting harder for me to understand it.

Congress set up a commission in 1967 to study pornography, it was the aim of congress at the time to find methods of cracking down on pornography and tightening up existing laws on smut. Well, the commission used up almost $2,000,000.00 and studied the situation for 2 years and came up with a suggestion that the government could have had for free from the smut peddlers, "since pornography can't be stamped out anyhow we might just as well let it go hell bent for leather." Since that wonderful decision the smut magazines are in print leaving nothing, absolutely nothing, to the imagination. Several book stores in Denver, for example, have entire sections devoted to books and magazines of this type. These stores charge a 50¢ browsing fee.

The dean of the U of Minnesota law school defended the report as a major contribution to research and scholarship. I didn't read the report, I've just seen some of the results, but if this is a major contribution, I can't help but wonder.

Every day I read in the papers that we are entirely too strict with the use of marijuana. Perhaps it should be a misdemeanor instead of a felony I'll go along with that concept but when I read that laws against it should be abolished, that it should be legalized, I feel a bit more than a little ill at ease. We're being told this over and over again by people who should know better. The same excuse is used for this as is used for smut, it can't be stamped out or controlled so we should leave it to people's judgement. Of course the smut and the pot will be for adults only and children can't use them. Dreamers, if you can get at it so can your kid. Don't fool yourselves into thinking that what you did can't be repeated by your offspring.

I suppose because we can't stamp out armed robbery, rape and burglary that these little gems should also be legalized. Perhaps I ain't thinking straight, but then perhaps I am.

TVCC Career Day Success

In spite of inclement weather Treasure Valley Community College's third annual Career Institute was a success, according to Al Carr, Assistant Director of Continuing Education who coordinated the affair. Representatives from 35 occupational areas were on hand at the all-day Friday program to explain requirements and opportunities to the more than 900 high school seniors who came to the TVCC campus from throughout Eastern Oregon and Western Idaho.

A special feature of this year's program was a seminar held for the 28 counselors who accompanied the students. Dr. Dwight Baird, retired president of Clark College, Vancouver, professor of education at Oregon State University in the Graduate School, was seminar leader.

Carr said at the conclusion of the day's activities, the smoothness of the operation was a result of excellent faculty involvement, referring to college instructors who contacted the exhibitors. He also expressed appreciation of the participating students and exhibitors.
