

PRIMITIVE EDUCATION? Not by a long shot. Writing on slate is an old Vietnamese tradition. And so it will remain as long as modern materials are unavailable. Yet, thanks to the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID), 18 million elementary textbooks have already been printed and distributed to Vietnam's schools. In addition, AID has helped the Vietnam government train more than 20,000 hamlet teachers to keep pace with its growing school population. Almost all elementary school-age children are expected to be enrolled by 1975. Working at her slate is six-year-old Kim Lim, who goes to a hamlet school in An Xuyen province, 200 miles southeast of Saigon. She is one of more than 2 million children presently attending elementary classes in South Vietnam.

ANNUAL CANCER CRUSADE GETS UNDERWAY TODAY

The annual crusade of the American Cancer Society's Oregon division will get underway Thursday, April 1, and continue through the month. Ken Wright, Springfield, Ore., state crusade chairman, stressed that the April crusade has a two-fold purpose: to raise funds for the society's research, education and service programs and to acquaint the public with life-saving facts about cancer.

"We are obviously very interested in raising funds," Wright stated, "but we are also vitally interested in alerting the public to the 7 cancer warning signals."

Wright, manager of the Springfield branch of the First National Bank of Oregon, pointed out that the Oregon division of the American Cancer Society sponsors 2 mobile educational units that travel the state year-around, bringing information about cancer to the public.

The mobile educational units, which are equipped with movie projectors, tape recordings and other educational aids, visit schools, county fairs, industries and other areas where people are gathered.

"We want every person in Oregon to learn and remember the 7 warning signals of cancer," Wright stated. "Lives can be saved through early diagnosis and treatment."

April has been designated as Cancer Control month by the U.S. Congress and Oregon's Gov. Tom McCall has urged everyone in the state to learn the warning signals and join in financial support of the society's Oregon division.

Chloro IPC is death on dodder.

And a hero to your alfalfa seed crop.

PPG's Chloro IPC Herbicide stunts dodder seedling growth during the crucial 10 to 14 days between seed germination and attachment to the host alfalfa plant. Your alfalfa won't be sapped of energy-producing nutrients needed to maximize growth and seed yield.

You'll get a bigger alfalfa seed harvest, a higher grade of seed and lower cleaning costs.

Your local supplier has a complete dodder-control program worked out for you. Check the dealer listed below. If you prefer, write to PPG Industries, Inc., 1500 N.E. Irving Street, Portland, Oregon 97232.

Dr. C.A. McIntyre, chief of pediatrics at Mercy Hospital and Idaho State School and Hospital in Nampa, was guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Treasure Valley Association for Handicapped and Retarded Children, Inc. held recently in Ontario. McIntyre spoke at some length about some of the things being done in several areas of mental retardation.

During the business meeting conducted by president Bill Kagayama of Ontario, dates for the upcoming rummage sale will be held May 21 and 22 with the place to be announced later. Persons desiring to contribute sale items may contact Mrs. Rudolf Broderson at 642-3424 in Payette or Mrs. Jack Mattoch at 542-3438 in Fruitland. All proceeds go to the Mary Kay School.

BIGHORN SHEEP FOR HELLS CANYON

Twenty Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep will find a new home in Oregon if all goes well with trapping and transplanting operations which will get underway in late March.

The bighorn sheep will be obtained at Jasper National Park in Alberta, Canada through the courtesy of the Canadian Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. On March 29 a Game Commission crew will leave for Alberta where it will work with J. Christokas, park superintendent. All expenses of the trapping and transplanting will be borne by the Game Commission.

Home for the bighorns will be in Hells Canyon of the Snake River, a rough, fairly remote area in northeastern Oregon. The animals will be hauled by truck from Jasper Park to the release site at the mouth of Hells Canyon Creek, a steep rimrocked gorge located about a mile below Hells Canyon Dam.

Timber Growth Barely Holding Its Own

The timber quality index made a slight gain over last year, according to the National Wildlife Federation, but only because the cut on public domain was reduced by a billion board feet from the allowable cut.

But the nation's demand for timber will double in 30 years and at present cutting rates will fall 2.5 billion cubic feet farther behind in 10 years. This is the startling picture painted by the Federation in its second annual environmental quality index in an attempt to awaken the American people to the quality of our environment during National Wildlife Week March 21 through 27.

The theme this year asks the question, "Wildlife--Who Needs It?" Several thousand members of the Oregon Wildlife Federation will be answering this question during the week with "WE ALL DO," simply because wildlife acts as a barometer to the quality of our own environment.

The Federation reports that our timber resources continue to make America a wealthy nation. Over half the saw timber is in public ownership while young growing timber is mostly in private hands. Our national forests, if we are not too greedy, can supplement the production from private lands. But, says the Federation, private owners must be educated to the vital need to manage this resource for the future as well as the present. Also, logging practices must be handled to minimize destruction of the land, to minimize soil erosion and stream pollution.

Some gains have been made in more efficient use of slabs, edgings, sawdust, and other residues which make up nearly one-third of the total timber volume. Research is sorely needed in this area to overcome the economic and technical difficulties still preventing use of most residues.

FFA Parent And Son Banquet

The Nyssa FFA Chapter is planning their 29th Annual Parent and Son Banquet for April 5 at 7:30 at the High School Cafeteria. An Agriculture Products display will be held starting at 7:00. Due to increased costs of awards, labor, food and other numerous items there will be a charge of $1.25 per plate this year for everyone except display and award sponsors and FFA members. Sam Harsin, this year's past State FFA Vice President, will be the featured speaker.

The big challenge must be in recycling of discarded wood products, such as paper. For example, if the paper from the New York Times alone were recycled for one year, 36 square miles of forest would be saved. We presently burn most of this paper after only one use--destroying a valuable resource and adding to our air pollution. Most important, forests produce more than just timber.
