

Trojan Nuclear Center To Be Finished Next Year

When completed in 1972, this visitor information center at PGE's Trojan nuclear project on the lower Columbia river will contain a lecture theater, computerized teaching machines and educational displays explaining the operation of the plant. The unique educational facility will be available to science teachers and student groups throughout the Northwest.

Sometime in the summer of 1972, visitors to the Trojan nuclear project will begin to enjoy a million-dollar visitor information center in which they will duplicate the experience - in a simulated manner - of stepping inside an atom or a drop of water. A unique feature of the center will be the ecosphere - a theater inside an optically created sphere forming a gigantic projection screen. Viewers will be told the story of energy and the environment by high-impact, multi-image projection utilizing sophisticated optical and electronic equipment specially developed for the PGE exhibit. The effect will be as if the viewer is actually "inside" and a part of the presentation.

The Portland architectural firm of Wolff, Zimmer, Gunsul, Frasca, Ritter has designed the 15,700 - square - foot structure; and a San Francisco design firm, Walter Landor Associates, is developing the display and exhibit concepts.

The center will include ample parking, a large lobby and refreshment area, office space, restrooms, a sizable lecture theater, and space for a variety of displays explaining the operation and safety of the nuclear plant.

An added feature in the center will be a bank of computerized teaching machines where visitors may test themselves on information gained from the exhibits.

The visitor center is intended to be a useful and unique educational facility and will be made available to science teachers and student groups throughout the Northwest. After construction of the Trojan plant is completed in 1974, the center will be used in conjunction with escorted tours through the 1,130 - megawatt, $235-million power-producing facility.

Experiences Of Bible Lands Tour Related By Rev. Richard Krause

"It was enlightening," was the comment of a Nyssa man, the Rev. Richard D. Krause of Rt. 2, reflecting on his recent 17-day tour of Bible lands as part of a college seminar.

Krause, who is an Assemblies of God minister and serves as youth director at the Assembly of God in Wilder, visited Copenhagen, Rome, Athens, Beirut, Cairo, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Sea of Galilee, and coast of Israel with a group from Northwest college, Kirkland, Wash., which is an Assemblies of God institution.

At each stop the group made note of its historical and Biblical significance. A pre-tour study, as well as the on-tour instruction, highlighted Bible history, geography and prophecy.

"I saw Israel as a land of rapid growth," Krause said. "It has a futuristic outlook with Bible prophecy being fulfilled daily."

"Not only is there restoration of Israel, but there is vast re-forestation in Israel until the land is truly 'blossoming as the rose'. The people everywhere there were friendly and appreciative, in spite of the constant war threat of the Middle East. The trip did, however, make me thankful that I live in America." Krause took many pictures during the tour and is currently available to show some of his slides and discuss his trip at church meetings, service clubs or other groups. Parents of Krause are Mr. and Mrs. Virgil T. Krause of Rt. 2, Nyssa. He graduated from Nyssa High School in 1961, then attended Northwest College, Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa, and graduated from Bethany Bible College in Santa Cruz, Calif., last May.

Business Tax Credit Ullman Introduces

Congressman Al Ullman today introduced legislation that could restore the business investment tax credit, retroactive to January 1, 1971, at a level of 7%.

The credit, which was repealed by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, would apply to a variety of investments made by both corporations as well as small businessmen and farmers in equipment and machinery.

Under the bill, a businessman would be allowed to credit against his federal tax liability up to 7% of the value of qualifying investments he has made during the tax year.

Ullman said, "This credit, which was initiated in 1962 under President Kennedy, was one of the most effective economic tools developed in recent years. I fought its repeal in 1969, when I warned the House that we would need to restore it at an early date."
