FATHER'S DAY AROUND THE WORLD

Fathers everywhere get gifts of one kind or another at one time or another. It's a nice way to honor the head of the household and tell him how much his hard work and devotion is appreciated.

The precise custom depends on where you come from, but the idea is the same. In Africa, the traditional time to honor dad is the day you marry his daughter. In gratitude for his having reared such a beauty, the groom gives a few head of cattle. The first son has an obligation of a different sort. His task is to kill a lion. This accomplished, he presents the skin to dad.

America has the unique tradition called Father's Day which occurs the third Sunday in June. No one seems to remember what the first gift was, but just like Eve, it was a woman who started it. Her name was Mrs. John Dodd, her father reared several motherless children, and in 1910 Mrs. Dodd decided to give him the day.

A lasting present, the custom continues to be honored, and over the ages some reasonable substitutes for lion skins have been suggested. A gift with a personal touch is nice and toiletries or travel sets are popularly welcome.

One such set that came to our attention has a rather updated touch of Africa. That's the handsome Bacchus Stud Box, an elephant hide textured travel case filled with grooming aids. The name Bacchus will doubtless remind you of that entertaining god of pleasure of whom this masculine scent is a namesake. Like Bacchus, who purportedly gave men something better to do with their time than fight, this fragrance is also dedicated to men.

The name of Bacchus gives it a certain charisma and the contents are practical. After Shave, Cologne, and Deodorant all come packaged together in the elegant case. The box is useful too, both as a travel unit or for holding studs and other odds and ends that men accumulate.

Other contemporary Father's Day gift suggestions include clothing, with neckties a favorite, games, sports equipment, and like the Dinka tribes man of Africa, labor. Although today's version might take the form of polishing the car or helping out in the yard!
