Vets Return To Seek Work

More jobs are being filled by returning servicemen as the result of an intensive campaign by the Oregon Employment Division and the Governor's Task Force on Jobs for Veterans. Ross Morgan, Administrator of the Employment Division, said today that a recent study shows that the number of non-agricultural jobs being filled by recently separated veterans has increased 65 percent, comparing the first five months of this year to the last six months of 1970.

Veterans are returning to Oregon at the rate of about 700 a month, Morgan said, and there are approximately 16,000 unemployed veterans in the state. The Employment Division, in cooperation with the Governor's Task Force, has mailed letters and informational brochures containing services and training opportunities for veterans to 42,000 Oregon employers. The letter, signed by Governor Tom McCall, urged employers to hire veterans and to use the informational brochure to learn about training opportunities through which veterans might fit into their businesses.

Veterans are returning to an Oregon labor market in which there are nearly 60,000 more workers than there are jobs. Oregon employers have thus far been highly responsive to the state, local and federal efforts on behalf of veterans, Morgan reported.
