MAX LIERANCE NAMED CHIEF, RESOURCE DIVISION, OREGON OFFICE OF BLM

State Director Archie D. Craft today announced that Maxwell T. Lieurance will succeed Murl W. Storms as Chief, Division of Resources, in the Oregon State Office of the Bureau of Land Management.

As resources chief, Lieurance will head a professional staff concerned with coordinating the management of timber, range, water, wildlife, land, minerals, and recreational uses. BLM manages these resources on 16 million acres in 11 districts in Oregon and Washington, deriving an income for the public of more than $60 million annually, plus major intangible environmental values.

Lieurance began his career with the Bureau of Land Management in 1951. He first came to the Vale District in January of 1954 as assistant manager, a position he held for 2 1/2 years prior to a promotion to Portland. This was during the controversial years of the Soldier Creek adjudications and settlement of agreements. This controversy resulted in a chapter, "The Battle of Soldier Creek" in the book, "Politics and Grass."

An ambition resulting from his first assignment in Vale to return as district manager was realized in 1959. One of the highlights of his career was being able to restore the reductions in livestock grazing made during the earlier adjudication years of the 1950's. These restorations resulted from the "Vale Project" which has gained international prominence as the largest range rehabilitation project in the world. It is an accelerated program of multiple use resource management, including land treatment, plus scientific management on the entire 4.6 million acre district.

Lieurance, with his wife Marcia, and children Jeff, Scott and Ann will leave in July for Portland where he will assume his new duties on July 25.

Harold Brendle Attends National Youth Science Camp

Oregon's National Youth Science Camp delegates Harry Brendle of Nyssa and Patrick Sitton of Corvallis began their three weeks with a warning against falling victim to "insidious isolationism." Congressman Ken Hechler of Huntington, guest speaker at the opening ceremonies of the camp, lamented the current trend toward "copping out" when faced with the problems of the modern world.

John M. Gates of Becey, commissioner of the state Department of Finance and Administration, greeted the campers on behalf of the governor; and delegate Tom Edgar of Pocahontas County welcomed them in the name of the people of the county.

Later in the ceremonies, campers unfurled their state flags before the dignitaries and local visitors. Flags and copies of the state songs had been donated to the camp by the fifty states.

As a closing note to the day's activities, camp director Joseph M. Hutchison Jr. charged the 100 young scientists to use their knowledge to make a better world for the future. Quoting from Robert Goddard, the father of space science, Hutchison reminded the delegates that "it is difficult to say what is impossible, for the dream of yesterday is the hope of today and the reality of tomorrow."

The three-week honors camp brings together 100 of the nation's top young scientists for three weeks of study with nationally known authorities in the sciences and humanities. Among the highlights of the camp schedule are a two-day trip to Washington as guests of the United States Senate; a visit to the National Radio Astronomy Observatory; work with an IBM 1130 computing system; hikes through the scenic West Virginia hills; and talks by such authorities as Michael Collins, command pilot of the Apollo 11 moon mission, and Dr. Isidore Adler, chief NASA scientist in charge of Apollo 15 and 16 geophysical mapping of the moon.

Harry Brendle left Nyssa June 18 and will be home July 12. The boys were guests of Governor Arch A. Moore, Jr. at the governor's mansion June 19.
