Nelson said the Governor's mail" on the state . . . the Governor decided to pay the ransom rather than stand up and fight. He failed in his unique opportunity to substitute the law of reason for the law of the jungle.

In the process of his decision, Nelson said, the Governor "set himself up as the determinor of the question of constitutionality of the issue, completely ignoring the separation of powers upon which our entire system of government is based."

The Farm Bureau executive said that "one can only assume that the Governor fell victim to the intimidation and misinformed statements of a number of persons not even citizens of this state. In so doing he has left open the door for a rise to power in Oregon of Cesar Chavez and his cohorts. One can only hope that their rise will not mirror the chaos they

Or they could have refused to do so. They will not have the freedom of choice if Chavez is allowed to run his operations here as he has in the past."

Nelson also indicated that "because of the Governor's action, Oregon farmers are now going to have to face the threat of Chavez. They do so, like the workers, with no protection. Undoubtedly, unless there is some change in the current situation soon, it will mean the loss of many men's businesses."

Nelson said he was not "especially impressed with the Governor's commission on farm labor relations, or his statement that he will dedicate the full resources of state government to the maintenance of law and culture and thousands of real farm workers to Cesar Chavez when he vetoed SB 677, the Agricultural Labor Relations Bill, Louis M. Wettstein, President of the Malheur County Farm Bureau, said today. SB 677 was a positive, progressive thinking bill designed to solve the farm-labor problem. We are extremely disappointed that the Governor abandoned his responsibility to help find solutions to existing problems, Wettstein stated.

This bill would have given rotection to our farm laborers, s well as the farmers, if Goernor McCall had not vetoed Under provisions of this bill, ey could join a union or choose to join a union. RODEO COMPETITION Competition in the seven main events is in saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, calf roping, team roping, bull riding, bulldogging, and barrel racing.

Featured attraction both nights will be Dell Anderson, Ontario, who will jump his horse Kipper through a flaming hoop. Anderson goes through this routine without the help of saddle or bridle, and using a tack rein only the first time around, and nothing after that. They will do a series of jumps leading up to the finale, when he lights a torch going through the flaming hoop.

Chairman Snodgrass promises that this will be one of the best of the many successful Nyssa Nite Rodeos, with excellent stock and some of the West's best cowboys on hand to insure a fine show. The board and many community volunteers have worked hard to put the rodeo grounds in shape. The grounds will be watered, and the stands are in good shape. Snodgrass says that all Nyssa area residents are invited to bring the family and enjoy an evening of great Western entertainment.

Dell Anderson And Kipper

Dell Anderson and his horse, Kipper, go over a simulated wall, one of the several acts which will be performed by the pair at the Nyssa Nite Rodeo. They also do a cross rail jump, a three rail graduated broad jump, and for a grand finale jump through a hoop of fire, lighting torches as they go through. Anderson does all his jumps without the help of saddle, bridle or reins.
