

National High School Rodeo At Filer, Idaho

"Rodeo of Champions" with winners from twenty-five states will participate in the National High School Rodeo to open at 2:00 p.m. on August 3 at the Filer Fairgrounds.

The gigantic rodeo, sponsored by the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, promises action plus with two arena-events going on simultaneously for a five-day interval with two performances daily at 2:00 and 8:00 p.m.

Special church services will be staged on horseback on Sunday to be followed by the closing performance at 2:00 p.m. at which time prizes will be awarded to national finalists.

About 500 contestants, all state winners, will participate in the rodeo which is expected to draw approximately 40,000 spectators. Participants are coming from Florida, Louisiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Texas and California to name but a few of the 25 states to be represented by champions.

Washington will send contestants for the first time this year. There will be Canadian representatives in attendance, not to compete, but as spectators.

This is by no means an amateur rodeo. The high school rodeo contenders will ride the same mean one-ton Brahma bulls that hate everything and everybody in sight, and the savagely twisting turning broncos that rodeo circuit riders face in rodeos throughout the nation. In fact the stock for the National High School Rodeo is furnished by Cotton Roser of the Golden State Rodeo Company. It is termed some of the meanest, wildest, most unpredictable that man has to face in the arena. Almost twice as many animals are needed to stage this event as for the Madison Square Garden Rodeo.

Timing for the events is comparable to the Rodeo Cowboy Association times even though the contestants are high school students.

Announcers will be John Huston and Don Harrington, Rodeo clown, Tim Oyler, one of the best of the younger clowns on the rodeo circuit, will delight the crowds with his antics, while protecting rodeo contestants.

This will be a gala event with exhibits and displays of western wear, rodeo articles and souvenir items including trade and silver commemorative dollars. Devoted to horsemanship, sportsmanship and scholarship for the American youth in an American sport, the National High School Rodeo Finals promises week-long top entertainment.

Game Commission Stresses Juvenile Firearms Training

The fall hunting seasons are fast approaching. Several seasons get underway in August. September opens up a full month of hunting with several seasons on tap, and the general big game and upland game seasons are in full swing in October.

With such a slate of hunting on the calendar we wish to advise prospective juvenile hunters of their need for training in the safe handling of firearms. And this training must be obtained before youngsters embark with family and friends to participate in this great outdoor recreation.

The law requires that to be able to hunt in the fields and forests of the state (except on one's own property), boys and girls through the age of 17 must take and successfully pass a course in firearms safety. Upon completion of the course the youngster is issued a hunter safety certificate which he must carry with him at all times he is in the field hunting.

These important instructional classes are now being held or will be scheduled in all areas of the state. The courses are offered by sportsmen's clubs, civic organizations, interested individuals, and by schools in some areas. Under the direction of Cal Giesler, hunter safety supervisor for the Game Commission, about 3,000 volunteer instructors are certified to train juveniles in the safe handling of firearms. Parents are also invited to take advantage of the classes - free for the taking unless actual range shooting is added, in which case minor expenses may be incurred.

The required course for juveniles is a minimum of six hours of instruction. The instruction covers basic firearms nomenclature, sighting, shooting, and handling techniques, and safety rules which must be followed if accidents are to be prevented at home, on the shooting range, or in the field.

Some instructors (optional with all) schedule eight or more hours of instruction. The added hours may include instruction and actual range shooting, hunting ethics and sportsmanship, outdoor survival, and perhaps a few principles of wildlife management. In this writer's opinion, such training is of paramount importance because it teaches kids to respect the game they hunt, the land on which they hunt, and respect for their fellow man. Certainly our budding outdoorsmen need instruction in woodsman ship and survival along with choosing proper equipment and its care.

We advise young boys and girls who have not had previous training that now is the time to enroll. Most instructors are themselves avid hunters and once the seasons begin, these men cease scheduling classes to spend their time in the field enjoying the hunting that they love so well. If you don't obtain the required instruction now, you will not be able to hunt this fall.

It's up to parents and youngsters to take the initiative. Instructors are ready and willing but they can't teach you unless you enroll. And a final point of interest - these instructors are volunteer citizens, experts in their knowledge of firearms, the shooting sports, and the outdoors, who donate their time, sometimes at considerable expense, to provide boys, girls, and adults as well, with this valuable firearms training.

SURVIVAL COURSE OFFERED AT TVCC
Once again the Treasure Valley Community College Office of Continuing Education will be offering the class, Wilderness Survival. Two instructors from the Survival Department of Brigham Young University will conduct the class in the Mormon Basin area north of Brogan.

Anyone, male or female, from age 13 up in good health will be welcome. The session will begin with orientation and registration at 9:00 a.m. Monday August 23 in the Weese Building. Instruction will be given until 5:00 p.m. Following a good night's sleep the group will leave from the campus at 7:00 a.m. Tuesday Morning for the campsite.

In the field the survivalists will learn the techniques of procuring food, fire, water and shelter. They will study edible and medicinal plants, route finding in the wilds, the fashioning of primitive stone, bone, and wood tools and implements. The class will end on the return to campus about noon Sunday August 29.

Lady Golfers Have Different Program

Members of Ladies Golf at Ontario meet on Tuesdays and are trying to establish interest for everyone by having something different planned for each week.

This year, they have dispensed the potluck dinners and "Tee Off" time is any time convenient to the players with golfers usually there by 8:30 a.m., while it is cool and enjoyable for play.

This Tuesday was just "open play" but plans are underway for a "Best Ball" to be held August 10, Joyce Whittet announced.

Tuesday, July 20, the women held "Low Net and Putts". Balls were given as prizes and Arlene Brammer of Nyssa had low with 14 putts, Margaret Bracken of Nyssa won low net with 35, Lenora Walker and Claire Farber tied for second with 15 putts and Marge Pace of Parma received a ball for the most putts.

SEASONS TO BE SET FOR BIRD HUNTING

Oregon outdoorsmen are reminded that the Game Commission will hold a public hearing Saturday, August 14, at its Portland headquarters, 1634 S.W. Alder, to consider hunting regulations for the taking of upland birds, waterfowl, and small game animals. The meeting will convene at 10 a.m.

At the meeting the Commission will hear a status report on upland bird production, staff recommendations for the fall seasons, and recommendations from the public. Opening dates for chukars and pheasants are already set - October 2 for chukars and October 16 for pheasants. On the agenda will be bag limits, length of seasons, hunting seasons for grouse and quail, and general hunting rules. The Commission will also consider regulatory measures pertaining to nongame animals under statutory provisions of House Bill 1123 passed by the 1971 Legislature.

Following the public hearing the Commission will adopt regulations which will be final for the 1971 hunting seasons.

TWO WEEKS LEFT ON DEER PERMITS

The Oregon Game Commission reminded deer hunters that they have just over two more weeks to file applications for antlerless deer permits if they want to be included in the drawings. Deadline for submitting applications is August 10; the public drawing is scheduled for 10 a.m. August 20. Applications to be included in the drawings must be received by the Game Commission by 5 p.m. on the deadline date.

Late applications are set aside until after the drawings are held. Only if surplus permits are left over are late applicants given consideration. With the wide interest in antlerless deer permits, the Game Commission suggests submitting applications in time since it is doubtful any permits will remain following the drawing.

and Conservation Commissioners at its annual meeting at Aspen, Colorado on July 22. The new award is designed to recognize the ideal fish and game commission, basing the judging on such characteristics as avoidance of partisan politics in making decisions regarding the wildlife resource, consideration of the professional staff's suggestions on biological matters, lack of provincialism, and several other criteria.

Oregon's Game Commission being recognized by the award consisted of John Amacher of Winchester, who resigned prior to the end of his term; Frank Moore of Idleyld Park, who replaced him; Dan Callaghan of Salem; George Hibbard of Oregon City; Pat Metke of Bend; and James Whittaker of Pilot Rock.

The performance of the six men of the Oregon Commission was judged against the commissions of the other twelve western states.
