Herb Sez ...

I managed to be one of the first on board the bus at Boise. This gave me the chance to scan the couple of dozen passengers still coming aboard. There was no doubt that the bus was going to be loaded to its capacity of 53 passengers and I wondered which one of the group I'd have to share the seat with. The prospects ran the gamut from the well dressed business man to the frowny beatnik. I didn't particularly care who landed with me, male or female, young or old I only hoped it wouldn't be the young man with the multiple patches on his pants. He didn't look clean. His beard was unkempt and I doubt if he had used a comb for several days. He looked like a very angry young man. You have already guessed it. I drew the hippie as an overnight seat partner to Salt Lake. I never found out just why he was angry at the United States, for the United States was good to him. He admitted that he abhorred doing manual labor. In July he had hitch hiked across Wyoming and in September he was going by bus. He evidently had money, none of which he spent for soap. I spent eight hours in close proximity to this jerk. He spoke only in monosyllables and only once did I see him smile and that was when he was goggling in ahead at Salt Lake City. I pity the person who had to ride with him to Chicago unless it was one of his own kind. At the Salt Lake terminal I saw dozens of these young people changing buses, young men and women shabbily and well dressed. They had one thing in common, NONE of them smiled. I wonder why they look at the world with such a gloomy attitude. I, personally, think this is a beautiful world and rates more than a frown. Many of you will remember the depression of the '30s and my honest opinion is, that people on WPA were happier then than a majority of these kids with dough enough to travel continually all over the world. They look for faults, and naturally they find faults. This is not a

Banks Important Lenders To Oregon Farmers

Oregon banks remain a major source of credit and other financial services to farmers in our State, according to J. W. Leslie, Manager, Ontario Branch, First National Bank of Oregon who represents the Oregon Bankers Association as Malheur County Key Banker. Based on the 30th annual farm lending summary of the Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee of the American Bankers Association, Leslie reported that at the beginning of the year, Oregon banks were helping farmers with $148 million in loans. This total included $127 million in production loans and $21 million in farm mortgages. At the same time, $89 million in farm loans was held by life insurance companies, $134 million by the Federal Land Banks, $118 million by Production Credit Associations, and $8 million in non-real estate loans, plus $3 million in real estate loans by the Farmers Home Administration. About 50 per cent of the production credit extended by lending institutions to Oregon farmers came from Banks. Mr. Leslie said that "bankers in Oregon are conscious of the large capital investments required in agriculture today and are making a concerted effort through improved lending programs to meet these changing credit demands of the State's farmers." The increased use of credit by farmers, according to Mr. Leslie has been accompanied by a substantial gain in the total

Math Round-up At Baker Friday

More than 200 educators from throughout Eastern Oregon are expected to participate in a Math Round-up at Baker Senior High School on Friday, October 8. This is one of four regional mathematics conferences sponsored by the Oregon Council of Mathematics Teachers in different areas of the state. Norman Baxter and Joe Miller of Baker are co-chairmen of the Round-up. They have secured outstanding leaders in the field of mathematics to direct sectional meetings with topics of special interest to elementary teachers, junior high and senior high teachers. Highlight of the conference will be a panel discussion on "The Systems Approach of Mathematics Education in Oregon."

WORK SMARTER - NOT HARDER. PERSPIRATION-soiled garments should be put to soak immediately in one of the laundry products containing a bacteria fighter such as products used for diapers. They can also be soaked in salt water overnight. Many women working today find they do not have training to do what they really want to do. Education can mean working to fulfill your later life, not just to kill time.
