Bighorn Prosper In Oregon

Oregon's bighorn sheep continue to prosper, including the latest transplants into the Strawberry Mountains near John Day and the Wallows in Wallowa County.

Just recently 13 bighorns were observed by Ron Bartels, district game biologist at Enterprise, in Lostine River drainage, 12 within one mile of the site where 20 bighorns were released last summer. The animals were obtained at Jasper Park in Alberta, Canada, and are of the Rocky Mountain species. A previous release of Rocky Mountain bighorns was made by the Game Commission in Hells Canyon of the Snake with stocks also obtained from Alberta.

In the Strawberry Mountains, three bighorns were recently observed about two miles from Canyon City. These sheep are the desert or California bighorns transplanted to the Strawberry Mountains in August of 1971. The band of 21 sheep, including several rams, was trapped at Hart Mountain.

Also observed recently were 23 desert bighorns in the Steens Mountain area. The report indicated the animals appeared alert and healthy.

Done by order of the Board of Directors.
