Herb Sez ...

I'm not curious yellow. I'm Curious Green, green with envy and curious as to how to get a job on a study group. There are more studies going on in this country at the present time than there are things to study. These studies cost money, big money and frequently they prove nothing and often that which is proven is of little consequence. Not too long ago much time and cash was spent to come up with the astounding facts that rich people were, as a group, happier than poor people. They also learned that rich people had better medical facilities than poor people. If this proved anything I don't know the remedy except that all medical treatment must be free and no one could spend cash for better treatment.

Several years ago a study was made of the love life of the bullfrog. Hurrah! It's nice to learn that frogs aren't produced automatically. If there is a tse-tse fly plague in the Congo some smart congressmen are certain to use it as an excuse to travel to the Congo to protect we'uns here at home.

Another nice use of the study policy is to stall on a project. I had never heard of the White Cloud area (but I've only lived in Idaho for about 60 years) until someone wanted to use a small portion of it. Ever since that time the area has been under a prolonged study. As long as the area can be kept as a study area nothing can be done with it and that's exactly what the preservationists want. They don't want anything to be done with it - ever. They want to keep it in a state of wilderness for the pleasure of a few. As long as they can keep a study going the White Clouds will remain a wilderness. I'd love to see the house bill making the White Clouds a National Recreation Area. But the senate will go for a Park or Wilderness area which is no lumbering, no grazing, no mining, no nothing but recreation.

Many people want a moratorium on Hells Canyon so that a seven year study can be made. What more's to be learned about that gouge in the earth's surface? As for myself I couldn't care less what happens but I can envision tour after tour at federal expense going up and down the canyon. My problem is how does one go about being included in the study tours that will take place in the canyon and hundreds of other places. I may not be an expert on geology but I'll bet Arthur Godfrey's no-whiz on the subject either.

BEEF CATTLE FIELD DAY MARCH 28

The annual Beef Cattle Field Day for the Squaw Butte Experiment Station will be held March 28 at the Poison Creek Grange Hall, 2 miles East of Burns, starting at 10:00 a.m. according to George Bain County Extension Agent.

During the day discussions will be held on animal waste disposal and requirements of the Department of Environmental Quality. Feeding and management of the cow for maximum calf production, livestock water as it effects calf weights, and sagebrush invasion of crested wheatgrass seedings.

Following lunch the meeting will move to the Research Center at Section Five, where those attending will witness alfalfa feeding trials emphasizing rates of growth at harvest, long vs. chopped hay, various sources of protein supplements, various systems of feeding meadow hay, creep feeding of fall calves, digestion studies and irrigated pasture and alfalfa hay production.

Ranchers attending these field days in the past have felt they received some very practical and useful information, Bain says.
