Hunting, Fishing License Sales Top Million Mark

Hunting and fishing continue to be major attractions for Oregon citizens as evidenced by 1971 license sales which went almost 23,000 over the million mark.

John McKean, state game director, said that a few receipts remain in the hands of license dealers but the final tally of licenses issued will not change much from the figures presented.

License sales excluding salmon-steelhead licenses totaled 1,022,372, according to receipts received. Outstanding receipts may increase this total by a few hundred licenses. Salmon-steelhead licenses are treated similarly to deer and elk tags since a regular hunting or fishing license is a prerequisite to the other.

The number of regular angling licenses issued totaled 531,459. In 1970 just over 515,400 angling licenses were issued. The figure includes combination licenses, resident angler, nonresident angler, vacation angler, and other general licenses. Daily licenses issued continued to soar upward with sport fishermen who angle occasionally purchasing 303,162 of the daily permits, an increase of close to 17,800 over 1970.

Salmon-steelhead licenses issued totaled almost 360,000, an increase of about 6,800 licenses from the preceding year. About 30,200 of these licenses were issued free to juveniles. A new high of 377,339 hunting licenses was issued which includes licenses in all categories including combination. This represents an increase of more than 5,700 hunters in the field last year than in 1970.

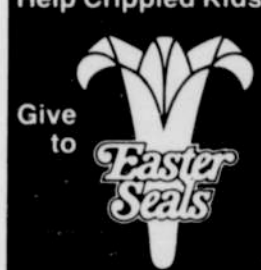

The number of deer hunters dropped slightly, probably the result of severe cutbacks in the number of antlerless permits available as well as poor deer season predictions. The number of tags issued totaled 284,670, about 7,000 less than the 1970 season. Twenty years ago the number of deer hunters totaled just over 174,000.

Elk hunting continued to gain in popularity as shown by just over 76,800 tags issued compared with 73,500 the previous year. Elk herds were reported to be in excellent condition for the 1971 hunting season which probably influenced more hunters to participate. In 1951 just over 28,700 hunters purchased elk tags.

Following is a breakdown of licenses and tags issued in 1971. Twenty years ago just over 416,000 licenses were issued, less than half the number issued last year. Also, the number of salmon and steelhead anglers has more than doubled in the past ten years.
