TV Association for Handicapped and Retarded Children

Mrs. Lois Silvers, special education teacher from Weiser, who has initiated many innovative programs with great success, presented a program on reading methods she developed to help the handicapped child learn to read at the May meeting of the Treasure Valley Association for Handicapped and Retarded Children, Inc. held recently in Ontario.

Mrs. Silvers concluded her presentation by showing the audience some of the books which she had written both for individual students and for the class as a group.

During the business meeting prior to Mrs. Silvers' presentation, Malheur County school superintendent, LeRoy Paulsen told the audience of some of the things involved in the change-over of the Mary Kay School from a private school to the public school system. Currently Idaho and Oregon have entered an agreement to equally share the operating expenses of the school. A number of new programs are being considered for Mary Kay School in order to improve the curriculum and provide more learning opportunities for the students. Among the new programs under consideration is one for the exceptional children between the age of 0 to 6 years of age. While federal funds are available for the training of pre-school age children, local school personnel cannot submit an application until there is sufficient evidence for the need of such a program. Parents of exceptional children within this age limit, are encouraged to contact either LeRoy Paulsen or Martha Christensen, the director of the Mary Kay School and leave information about your child.

While the administration duties of the Mary Kay School will come under the I.E.D., the school will still function under the guidance of the board of directors of the Treasure Valley Association for Handicapped and Retarded Children, Inc.

Martha Christensen reported on the district special olympics held recently at Caldwell and reported that all Mary Kay participants garnered ribbons with several first places among the varied events.

Favorite Foods

When I think of sauerkraut I think of spareribs. They're an A#1 combination! Just open a large can of kraut, dump it into your heaviest cooker, add 2 lbs. of spareribs and bring to a boil. (I add a cup of water too). Turn range switch to simmer and cook several hours. Wow! Is that good. Then while talking about spareribs I remember Luau Ribs and that's another delectable dish!

LUAU RIBS

- 2 4 1/2 oz. jars (1 cup) strained peaches (baby food)
- 1/3 cup catsup
- 1/3 cup vinegar
- 2 tsp. soy sauce
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tsp. ginger
- 1 tsp. salt
- Dash pepper
- 4 lbs. meaty spareribs (3 inch lengths)

For sauce, mix all ingredients except ribs. Rub ribs on both sides with salt and pepper. Place ribs, meat side up, in foil-lined shallow pan. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees) 15 minutes; spoon off fat. Pour sauce over ribs. Continue baking in moderate oven (350 degrees) 1 1/4 hours or until done, basting with sauce several times. Cut in serving pieces. Makes 6-8 servings.

And now - a complete turn-about! Fresh Fruit Salad! I have never liked a plain salad dressing on fruit - especially fresh and when this recipe popped up I knew I had solved my problem. Then I found if I mixed the dressing with my electric blender I really had it made. It didn't separate!

FRUITS WITH ADE DRESSING

- 2/3 cup undiluted frozen concentrate limeade or lemonade
- 2/3 cup honey
- 2/3 cup salad oil
- 2 tsp. celery seeds

Combine in small bowl; beat until smooth. Any fruits such as peaches, pears, oranges, bananas, strawberries, pineapple, grapefruit, apples, cantaloupe, watermelon or cherries, may be used with this dressing, either fresh or canned. A delicious addition might be avocado cubes, marshmallows, cream cheese balls (rolled in chopped nuts), toasted slivered almonds, chopped pistachio nuts, peanuts or whole pecan halves.

Brownlee Lake "Ready and Waiting" for Holidays

BROWNLEE--Idaho Power Company reported today that Brownlee Lake will still be some 75 feet below full elevation over the Memorial Day weekend because of flood-control requirements, but that its Hells Canyon-area parks are "ready and waiting" for holidaying visitors.

Brownlee's lowered level puts the 58-mile-long lake well below the end of boat ramps the utility provides at Woodhead Park and a number of other locations, according to operating superintendent Lester Garlinghouse.

However, boaters can use Idaho Power-maintained ramps on both Oxbow and Hells Canyon lakes, which are not subject to extensive drawdown by the river regulation.

Garlinghouse said the Corps of Engineers had requested the company to begin filling Brownlee Tuesday following its seasonal drawdown for flood control and that the heavily used lake should be back to its maximum level by the Fourth of July weekend.

To fill Brownlee and help limit downstream flooding, the utility will reduce flows passing Hells Canyon Dam to 25,000 cubic feet per second initially beginning Tuesday. It is expected that additional reductions may be made.

Idaho Power's Federal Power Commission license for the T. E. Roach Hells Canyon development requires that about a million acre-feet of space be made available in Brownlee for downstream flood control "if and as required" by anticipated spring runoff conditions.

The maximum drawdown lowers the lake to about 100 feet below the full mark.

"With Brownlee being a prime target for public recreation in the early part of the year, it would be ideal if the lake could be full for the first long holiday of the spring," Garlinghouse said.

"But in order to prevent or reduce flood damage, it is necessary that private and governmental agencies cooperate to the fullest extent possible."

T. R. Heikes, superintendent of power, said Idaho Power's four major parks and numerous other recreational facilities in the Hells Canyon development have undergone their annual spring clean-up and already have been attracting hundreds of pre-summer visitors.

The utility's major parks--Copperfield, McCormick and Hells Canyon, in addition to Woodhead-- provide a total of more than 200 spaces for trailers and campers.

Of that number, nearly 170 are equipped with electrical hookups and 50 with sanitary hookups. Each of the parks also contains a sanitary dump station.

Garlinghouse noted that the Corps of Engineers--coordinating agency for flood control in the Northwest--expects flows at the Dalles early in June to exceed the level causing flood damage downstream.

To control this predicted flood potential as much as possible, the Corps is holding space in a number of reservoirs besides Brownlee. They include Jackson and Palisades on the Snake; Dworshak on the Clearwater; Hungry Horse on the Flathead; Libby on the Kootenai; and Arrow Lakes, Duncan and Grand Coulee on the Columbia.

Insurance Youth Classic Golf Tournament June 3

A local qualifying round for the fourth Insurance Youth Classic will be held Saturday, June 3 at the Ontario Golf Course, according to Paul M. Johnston of Ontario, local tournament chairman.

The annual event is sponsored by the Malheur County Independent Insurance agents in cooperation with the Oregon Association of Insurance Agents.

Any boy less than 18 years old who qualifies under USGA rules of amateur status may participate in any one of 25 local qualifying tournaments which have been scheduled throughout Oregon during June and July. Entry forms are available now at golf courses throughout the state and the offices of local independent insurance agents. Completed entry blanks for the tournament must be submitted no later than June 3 to Mark Hipkins, local professional.

The two lowest scorers in each of the 18-hole local tournaments will enter the 36-hole state qualifying tournament which is co-sponsored by the Oregon Association of Insurance Agents and a select group of property and casualty insurance companies in Oregon.

The state play-off will be held Monday, July 31 at Waverly Country Club in Portland. A maximum of 50 players will participate.

State low scorer and two runners-up may advance to the Insurance Youth Classic national championships which will be held August 4 through 8 at Crestview Country Club in Wichita, Kansas.

The national tournament carries with it a $40,000 prize purse for 20 top players on the professional golfers tour. These professionals will play with the top 60 junior qualifiers for the final 36-hole tournament.

Some 160 youths, ranging in age from 15 to 17 will be eligible to play in the national Insurance Youth Classic, but each youngster faces the same challenge the pros on the tour must face: making the 36-hole cut.

"Swede" Johnsons Manage Gas Station In Sumpter, Oregon

Warren "Swede" Johnson and his wife, Ruth, have assumed the management of The Gas House, Arco service station in Sumpter, Oregon situated 30 miles west of Baker.

"Swede" and Ruth moved to Sumpter from Nyssa, where he had been employed by Goodman Oil Company to take over the station in Sumpter. They took over the management of The Gas House on May 6, 1972 and hosted the Grand Opening of the business May 13 and 14.

Many local persons visited the business to welcome the Johnsons as members of the community along with many persons from the surrounding areas as well as the Ontario and Vale areas. Free coffee and donuts were served and drawings for ten gallons of gas were held Saturday and Sunday, as well as the grand drawing for an 8 mm movie camera Saturday and an electric hostess serving tray Sunday.

The services at the Station include a long line of car-care items, as well as complete shop service and maintenance along with tires, tubes, batteries, and other accessories.

"Swede and Ruth would like all of their friends in the Ontario, Vale and Nyssa areas to stop in at the station when they are in the area and visit with them. They are a great asset to the community of Sumpter and the townspeople are glad to have them in Sumpter and hope they will enjoy their relationships here.
