SPEAKING OF BOOKS

BY CLYDE T. SWISHER
CHAIRMAN, DEPT. OF ENGLISH
NYSSA SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Madison Jones has written a brilliant and moving tragedy of the South today entitled A CRY OF ABSENCE. The novel deals with the transitional period of inexorable changes in an entire social order. No one has told it as it really is: the southern blacks and whites, and the good and bad in both sides, and the effect on the lives of all by outsiders who often lack understanding of the complexities of hard and cruel history.

Hester Glenn, the central character, is at the outset proud, cold, molded to the past, and a staunch defender of the old customs. To her, the literal forms of that past are right, and all other forms lie in the direction of error and evil. Her possessiveness and selfishness especially affect her youngest son and warp his development to independent manhood.

However, when a young black activist is murdered, the murder and its implications are a profound shock to Hester. Her responses, as she slowly realizes how she and her son are involved, form the heart of the novel as it builds in tension and suspense.

At first Hester will not admit her own error and guilt. She will not relax her grip on her younger son or listen to her older son. Thus her actions shape the terrible events that follow and inflame the conflicts in the society around her.

Hester is a complex character, real and terrible in her blindness in her dream-world living. Her agony is deeply moving as finally she is compelled by forces deep within her to act in the real world.

What gives the novel its universality is Jones' examination of all the characters and their responses to change. Counterparts of Hester are the Delmores, people from a different region and culture, but as rigid in their view of the world as she is in hers. Here then, I suggest, is a perceptive look at a tragedy of character, of social turmoil, and of the effects of people and events on each other.

Calories haven't been mentioned in these articles but I'm always aware I should consume less. Men and women alike throw up their hands in horror at the thought of eating a rich dessert - and then eat it and relish every bite.

If you can find a dessert that's good nutritionally, low in calories, and delicious you'd have a real winner. Here it is.

YUMMY DESSERT

1 8-oz. carton cool whip
1 3-oz. pkg orange gelatin (Deserta)
1 pint cottage cheese
1 8-oz. can crushed pineapple
1 11-oz. can mandarin oranges, drained

Sprinkle gelatin over cottage cheese and mix well. Stir in fruit and fold in cool whip. Pour into casserole and place in refrigerator for about 4 hours. Serves 6. 109 calories per serving. Any fruits may be used.

The next recipe has the advantage of being nutritious and has a very good flavor but rates "0" as far as being low in calories.

This has been a favorite of mine for years and I'm sure it will be yours.

Cottage Cheese is used and the flavor is masked by fruits and the gelatin.

LIME SALAD, DELUXE.

1 pkg. lime gelatin
1 cup miniature marshmallows
1 cup boiling water
1/2 cup pineapple juice
1 cup cream, whipped
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup cottage cheese
1 #211 can crushed pineapple, drained

Dissolve gelatin and marshmallows in boiling water. Add pineapple juice and place jello mixture in refrigerator until the consistency of egg whites. Whip cream, add sugar, cottage cheese, and pineapple. Fold into gelatin and pour into an 8x8x2 inch pan. Place into Refrigerator until set. Serves 8.

I've made this cherry pudding cake many times and always marvel at it's ingredients and the final results. It's unbelievable how little the effort and how great the results.

CHERRY PUDDING CAKE

two 1-lb 6 oz. cans of cherry pie filling one 1-lb. 3 oz. pkg. white cake mix
1/2 cup butter (1 stick) cut into very thin slices

Spread cherry pie filling evenly in a 13"x9"x2" baking pan. Sprinkle dry cake mix evenly over filling. Completely cover cake mix with butter slices. Bake in oven 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes. Makes 8 - 10 servings. NOTE: Blueberry, apple or pineapple pie filling may be used instead of cherry. Serve with a whipped topping.

Herb Sez ...

We talk today of man destroying the world. This can not be. Mankind can destroy mankind but never the world. Centuries after the last man has put out his campfire the world will still continue on its course.

We talk of this and that vanishing species. It was always this way. One species goes and another will take its place.

We worry about erosion but there has always been erosion and there always will be. The proof is the Mississippi Delta and the Grand Canyon.

I am talking about evolution, that gradual process of change which you and I can hurry up or slow down a wee bit but can never entirely stop.

It looks like this generation of Americans have the idea that the entire future of the world depends upon what we do today. Even if we have an atomic war and all human beings are destroyed the world will continue on its course for several million years. It won't be the same by your and my standards but it will still be here by some standards.

For the last 25 years I have been fishing on a short stretch of Goose Creek. In this short space of time trails along the creek have come and gone. Several fishing holes have disappeared and new ones have been formed. Many trees have fallen across the creek, remained for a short space of time then washed away. A road to the creek has become overgrown and is fast becoming a thing of the past. In other words, with no assistance or hindrance of mankind Goose Creek steadily changes. I know of one spot where the creek is deeper, and no trace of anything visible there today will be found.

I readily admit that it is far past time for us to be concerned about pollution and environment but I don't believe we should have a crash program that will prove a burden to industry and cost men thousands of jobs. Because no matter what mankind does today, evolution with fire, floods and insects will go right along making enormous changes.
