"And then the shy little rabbit hears the brave rabbit approaching..."

DALLAS, TEXAS: James Golden, regional program manager of Tax Payers Services in the Internal Revenue Service says the agency is already receiving conscience money that is sent in by anonymous tax payers who believe they cheated on their income tax returns. Golden said that five $100 bills fell out of one envelope received with no return address. It also contained an unsigned letter which read, "I cheated on my income tax returns and I can't sleep at night. P.S. If I still can't sleep, I'll send you $500 more." (Denver Post)

IN NEW ENGLAND, THEY'RE LAUGHING ABOUT FROM Funny Funny World

THE YOUNG female tourist from New York, checked out in her summer best, who approached a Maine lobsterman on the wharf one day while he was mending his traps. Her attempts at conversation were greeted with an occasional non-committal grunt. Finally, she shook her head and said, "I want to be sure full of lots of peculiar people." The old man looked up from his work and said, "Yes, Ma'am, but they all leave by Labor Day." (Kennebec Journal, Augusta, Maine)

SAW, A HERED based on a Vermont farm was asked how he managed to go through a month's pay so quickly. He explained, "Well, I guess I've been kind of over-supportin' myself."

A DARTMOUTH professor returned a book to Hanover Bookshop and said he wanted a refund. The book had been obviously well-thumbed and the clerk said, "I'm sorry, but we don't make refunds." The professor said, "But it says right here on the sales slip, 'Money cheerfully refunded if unsatisfactory.'" The clerk said, "That's true, but there was nothing unsatisfactory about your money." (Foster's Democrat, Dover, N.H.)
