TOURIST INDUSTRY IN IDAHO BIG BUSINESS

Tourists in Idaho spent over $200 million in the state during 1972, the Department of Commerce and Development reported. Travel ranks third as an Idaho industry and is perhaps Idaho's 'cleanest' industry. It's growth does not require the expansion of municipal facilities, utilities or schools. Tourists spend money for food, lodging, gasoline, services, recreation and merchandise; create thousands of jobs, increase the sales tax revenue, help to improve highways through their gas tax contributions.

Department travel figures for 1972, indicate that Idaho receives a return of $870.00 for every dollar invested in Idaho advertising and promotion, or measure in tax dollars, $26.10, for every dollar spent; a total of some $6 million. Taxes build schools, highways and provide other governmental services. If the travel industry did not exist, Idaho tax payers would have to increase their tax payments substantially to replace the revenue now contributed by travelers to our state.

In 1972, 12% of Idaho's civilian employment was engaged in services catering to travelers. Employment in travel-related businesses experience a four-percent average increase during the tourist season. This travel industry employment has risen four percent on a yearly average, since 1960. In round numbers this means that some 52,000 people in Idaho are engaged in travel or travel related businesses.

In August, the 1973 National Boy Scout Jamboree will be held at Farragut State Park in North Idaho. At that time approximately 35,000 Boy Scouts from all over the U.S. will be spending an estimated $20.00 each in Idaho while traveling to and from Farragut Park. An estimated 20,000 parents and interested tourists will also attend, spending an average of $15.00 per person per day in the state.

The Department of Commerce and Development predicts a considerable increase in tourist travel in Idaho in 1973, as Idaho continues its efforts to increase its share of the $105 billion dollar travel and recreation business of the United States.

Dates Set For 1973 Hunting

Except for Roosevelt elk, Oregon hunters will have similar opening dates for the 1973 hunting seasons as they did in 1972, according to regulations adopted by the Game Commission Friday, January 5, following a public hearing at its Portland headquarters.

Deer hunters will kick off the 1973 buck deer season on October 6, with the same date set for the opening of the chukar partridge season. Opening date for Rocky Mountain elk is October 27 and that for Roosevelt elk November 17, the latter season one week later than usual. The primary reason for delaying the Roosevelt elk season is the possibility that the black-tailed deer season may be extended later in November than normal. Bow hunters will begin the early archery hunts on August 25. The season for pheasants and quail was set to open October 20. The Commission also advised nimrods that the antelope season will probably open on August 18 although the date was not adopted as final.

Length of seasons, bag limits, and other regulations for 1973 will be established at a public hearing in May for big game animals and in early August for upland game birds and waterfowl.
