

University Women Study Juvenile Detention Policy

The handling of juveniles held in detention, the facilities for handling juveniles and the counseling of juveniles has been one of the study topics of the Ontario Branch of the American Association of University Women this past year. The Branch met Monday evening in Vale.

As a result of the study the group has given the problems, the group decided to pursue the matter further. Study has included a talk by Fred Robinson, Malheur County juvenile counselor, a tour of the juvenile detention facilities at the county jail, a discussion of the legal rights of juveniles by Attorney John Hutchens and a talk by John Biamont of the Children's Services Division, Department of Human Resources.

Of immediate concern to the women is state standards and guidelines for the qualifications of juvenile officers and for uniform methods of handling juvenile cases across Oregon. Senator Robert F. Smith is being contacted to see what legislation, if any, has been proposed along this line and to determine the status of such legislation and to what extent AAUW wishes to support such legislation.

The women expressed concern that cooperation between the various agencies and departments charged with handling juvenile problems was lacking. A public forum meeting, which will include representatives of CSD, Family Service Clinic, the juvenile judge, juvenile counselor and a member of the county budget board, was planned for early fall. It is the hope to enlighten the public concerning the problem and to help generate public support for changes that seem necessary.

Mrs. Winn Westcott, Vale, a former director in the Head Start program in Idaho, and Mrs. Audrey Tucker, Ontario, operator of the Peter Pan Play School, talked about the operation of private and publicly owned day care centers at the Monday meeting. Both stressed that loving care for the preschoolers was the primary objective of day care.

Of special concern to both women was a bill currently in congress that would establish rigid child-teacher ratios. The same bill would permit any mother, no matter what her financial circumstances, to use the day care facilities operated by the government. As a result, the day to day use of the center could fluctuate widely, creating a serious problem in staffing.

BLM Recreation Sites Open For Summer

Sixty-nine Bureau of Land Management recreation sites in Oregon are now open for the summer. BLM State Director Archie D. Craft announced today. The sites on national resource land are scattered throughout the state. They provide recreational opportunities for picnicking, rockhounding, swimming, fishing, and hiking as well as tent and trailer camping.

This year there will be no admission fees at any of the sites except Loon Lake, east of Coos Bay. There will be a $1 per day fee for the use at Loon Lake. At four sites, Fishermen's Bend, Wildwood, Clay Creek, and Millpond, there will be charges for the reserved use of group picnic shelters. Minimum charge is $12.50 for a group of 50, with rates scaled higher for larger groups. Reservations are made at the District office.

Twelve of the sites will have a $1 to $2 charge for overnight camping. These are: Yellow Bottom, Elkhorn, North Fork Eagle Creek, Alesa Falls, Rock Creek, Fishermen's Bend, Millpond, Hyatt Lake, Loon Lake, Gerber Reservoir, Beavertail, and Macks Canyon.

Three sites south of Burns on Steens Mountain will not open until July. These sites are at high elevations where road conditions prohibit early use.

Market Basket

RADISHES, GREEN ONIONS, SPINACH, and RHUBARB are local items in good supply. However, better growing weather will bring many more local vegetables to market this month, says Velma Seat, Extension Food Marketing Specialist, Oregon State University.

New crop POTATOES are from California. High freight costs caused by a shortage of trucks is contributing to the relatively high price of the potatoes. Russet potatoes are scarce and expensive.

Dry ONIONS, which were selling at astronomical prices, are beginning to drop in cost as supplies start to come in from Texas and California's Imperial Valley.

Although not particularly low priced, ARTICHOKEs are in peak season. ASPARAGUS prices will likely not get any lower. As usual, the season seems all too short.

The Hass variety of AVOCADOS are starting to come in. These have a tough black skin rather than the conventional green we associate with the Fuertes avocado. However, the quality is there—just the outside appearance is different.

TOMATOES are reasonably priced. The long range prediction is that prices will be relatively low throughout the spring and summer season.

STRAWBERRIES and GRAPE FRUIT are the best buys in fresh fruits. It is near the end of the season for Controlled Atmosphere APPLES and prices are generally on the high side. WATERMELONS and CANTALOUPEs from Mexico are costing a little less than earlier in the season.

Most of the supermarkets are abloom with FLOWERS and PLANTS for Mother's Day. Bedding plants for the garden also are abundant.

Supplies of Chinook SALMON are increasing. There is no better eating than the spring Chinook Salmon, although it is not inexpensive fare.

PORK prices are down a little. There has been no change in the cost of BEEF. Watch for specials on OREGON LAMB. You may want to buy extra cuts for the freezer.

A recreation site directory detailing information about facilities and the location of all the sites is available upon request from the Bureau of Land Management, 729 NE Oregon Street, Portland, or from any of the ten district offices in Oregon.

Consumers Need to Know

by LEE LANDIS

Consumerism is not an organized movement of millions of Americans speaking for a common cause in their own behalf. According to Dr. Max Brunk, professor of marketing at Cornell University, it is a movement of many fragments with issues frequently championed by small minorities.

Consequently, if we are to take a rational viewpoint on various issues, particularly those involving legislation, we need to know much more about consumerism.

Dr. Brunk points out that we must not make the mistake of assuming a universality of consumer values. As he explains it, we all tend to rationalize what we consider appropriate values for others and we have difficulty understanding and respecting values other than our own.

Traditionally our economy has been built around the market mechanism which has provided a voting place for the wants and needs of people. The uniqueness of this voting place is that it respects and responds to the will of minorities as well as majorities.

In the final analysis, he says, we must recognize that consumer protection does not come free. It must be paid for by the consumer, either in added costs or through deprivation. If consumers were to be fully protected in all actions, they would become nothing more than wards of the State.

It should be added to the Consumer Bill of Rights that the right to safety is appropriate only in the exercise of reasonable and prudent judgment by consumers. The right to be informed carries with it the responsibility of becoming better educated. The right to choose should include the opportunity to make the kind of choice which consumer protectionism prohibits. And the right to be heard should involve respect for the differing desires of one's fellowmen.

CYGON deserves to be your number one choice for pre-bloom sprays on seed alfalfa

Because—it gets top results at a practical low cost

- Effectively controls the most destructive insects—aphids, lygus bugs.
- Also provides leafhopper and grasshopper control—and reduction of alfalfa weevil larvae.
- Gives a high contact kill, then continues to work as a systemic insecticide from within the plant.
- Prevents damage from blasted buds, blossom drop and shriveled seed, caused by insects.
- Offers true economy—as little as ¼ pint per acre gives long-lasting control.

Plan your program now—and order CYGON from your insecticide supplier.

Before using CYGON, stop and read the label.
