Row crop production. We'll help every step along the way.

Rod George, manager (kneeling) and loan officer, Ray Rankin check on onion field.

This year has been one of the best of row crop production in Malheur County. Local farmers can thank exceptional growing conditions, as well as their own foresight and financial planning. Making sure that all phases of production are adequately financed is a big step toward ensuring a successful harvest.

At First National we know how important it is for local agribusinessmen to have someone they can rely on for loans. . . advice. . . and other financial assistance whenever they need it. That's why we make our agribusiness services so readily available.

Loans for seeding. . . machinery. . . production expenses. . . are all part of our agribusiness services. And all are backed by more than a century of experience helping farmers in Oregon to produce fine and plentiful crops.

Stop by our Nyssa branch soon. Our ag representative, Dutch Hipp, our branch manager, Rod George, and the rest of our staff will be more than glad to offer their assistance.

We'd like to get to know you.
