Your County Agent Says:

PLANTING TIME
This period of the year is one of the best times for seeding a number of forage crops on irrigated lands in Treasure Valley. Alfalfa, the clovers and pasture grasses can all be seeded now. Care should be taken to get the crops in before the middle of September so as to avoid winter kill.

There are several reasons why late summer planting of these crops is desirable. In the first place, the newly planted forage crops don't have as much competition from weeds as do the spring planted ones. Water grass, pig weed and a number of the other annuals don't start growth in the fall and the new seedlings get the jump on them. Another advantage is that the nights are getting cooler and longer now and it is easy to maintain soil moisture necessary to keep the young plants from drying out and dying.

ALFALFA hay producers who want long-lived hay stands should be sure and plant bacterial wilt resistant varieties. Bacterial wilt is especially bad in this area and plants that are susceptible may go out in two or three years. Especially good varieties for this area have been identified by the Malheur Experiment Station for outstanding hay yield and wilt resistance. These include Washoe, Lahontan and Orestan.

Alfalfa is oftentimes planted following a grain crop. In some instances volunteer grain is thick enough to crowd the newly planted legume. However, weed control chemicals are now available that will take the grain out of the new seedings of alfalfa.

the material and precautions in its use as well as the recommended use of the material. A few minutes spent checking the label could well prevent an avoidable mishap or a disappointment in results from use of the pesticide you use.

as soon as possible so enough time is allowed for the test to be returned and proper recommendations made before you start your fall plowing and land preparations for next year's crop.

SOIL TESTING
It might sound like we are rushing the season a little bit, but the time for soil testing for next year's crop is just around the corner. The best time to do your soil testing is between the time you remove this year's crop and start land preparation for next year's crop.

Another point to keep in mind is that fertilizers are going to be short this year, so it would be well to line up your 1973-74 supply as soon as possible. This shortage has come from increased demands and slow-up of the petroleum industry, which is one of the major sources of nitrogen and sulphur supply.

For many growers, this period is during the month of September and the first part of October. This means that the soil test should be taken

DAIRY HERD IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM PAYS OFF!
Frank Blackburn, Vale (D HIA) tester indicates interest is high and membership is increasing in Malheur's DHIA testing program. This is good for there is no better way for dairymen to evaluate their dairy herd than through such records. Feed costs - and just everything - costs more to do business now-a-days and no dairymen can afford a low producing cow in the herd when she's not producing enough to pay her way.

Yes, one can second guess poor producers but there's no "second-hand" guesses when you have facts and figures - records count and they'll help dairymen make money. Why not call Frank Blackburn or the County Agents' Office today and sign up? You'll be glad you did!
