Amalgamated Sugar Starts Energy Program

Effectively immediately, The Amalgamated Sugar Company will implement an energy-saving program throughout its operations in Utah, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

In making this announcement in support of national efforts to alleviate the energy crisis, A. E. Benning, president and chief executive officer of the company, reported that the four sugar factories have already implemented President Nixon's recommendations to turn off all unnecessary appliances and lights in the buildings and offices.

"I am asking that each person, in discharging his responsibilities in the company, comply with the President's requests in principle as well as in fact," Mr. Benning said in a special memorandum issued recently to all employees.

Need to Know

by LEE LANDIS

If we run out of energy fuels, our creature comforts will be curtailed sharply. So, alert homemakers are checking every nook and corner of the house for ways to conserve energy this winter.

Since insulation is the number one means of keeping heat in—or out—it's wise to start at the top of the house and work down when checking on insulation. Homes that are more than 15 years old are often not adequately insulated.

Storm windows and doors of wood or aluminum also reduce heat loss by as much as 50 per cent. In some areas of the country, homemakers leave storm windows on all windows the year around except for one or two needed for ventilation in hot weather. It reduces air conditioning costs.

Other vital areas to check include your heating plant: Does it operate efficiently? Has a qualified service man inspected it recently?

Be sure any cracks around windows and doors are sealed. Close dampers on fireplaces when not in use. Insulate hot water pipes that pass through cold spaces. Close off rooms that are not used regularly.

Double check to see that radiator covers do not trap heat or that furniture is not arranged to block the flow of heat. Incidentally, a layer of aluminum foil between a radiator and a cold wall will reflect heat back into a room.
