Twenty inches of Comfort... How does your home measure up?

Reddy recommends 20 inches of comfort to meet energy saving insulation standards:

- 10 inches in the ceiling (R30)*
- + 4 inches in the walls (R12)*
- + 6 inches in the floors (R21)*

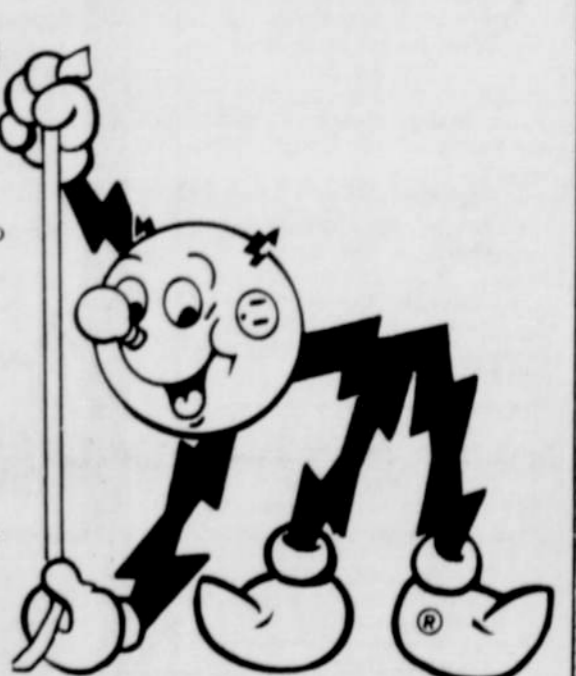

= 20 inches of energy-saving comfort

*Resistance factor

Reddy's minimum recommendation is 12 inches:

- 6" ceiling OR 4" walls OR 2" floors
- 8" ceiling OR 2" walls OR 2" floors
- 6" ceiling OR 2" walls OR 4" floors

Add double doors and windows, and weather-strip and caulk against air infiltration.
