Oregon Ski Slopes Enjoy Early Snows

Combine a snowier than usual November with a low elevation freezing level in Oregon and what do you have? Mid-winter skiing conditions in December.

Those are the conditions at all 17 of Oregon's ski areas, most of which were in full operation before Thanksgiving. Some major areas already have recorded from 80 to 100-inch snowpacks which, in a couple of cases, are more than twice as deep as any reported during the full 1972-73 season.

The famed Timberline Lodge Ski Area on Mt. Hood, the oldest area in Oregon and one of the pioneer ski areas in the nation, has the most snow on its runs at this time of year in its history. Timberline reported a 90-plus-inch snow depth heading into December, while neighboring Mt. Hood Meadows had over 100 inches. The nearby Multnomah-Ski Bowl area near the 4,000-foot level of the 11,235-foot mountain already had 5 feet of packed snow.

Similar conditions exist further south in the Cascades at the Hoodoo Ski Bowl and at the Willamette Pass Ski Area. Both the Mt. Ashland Ski Area in Southern Oregon and the Anthony Lakes area in the northeastern corner of the state enjoyed their earliest openings in history and report record depths for this early point in the season.

Realizing that gasoline isn't as abundant as this season's early snowfall, Oregon ski area operators have been busy organizing expanded bus service and encouraging car pools.

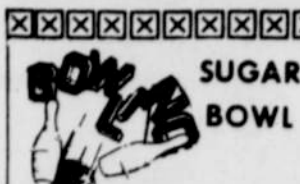

The Mt. Bachelor area, in cooperation with the Central Oregon Recreation Association, is providing a parking lot at the edge of Bend and organizing car pools to transport skiers 22 miles to its slopes. The area also operates its own bus service to Bend and to nearby Sunriver and the Inn of the Seventh Mountain, two of Central Oregon's fine, year-round resorts. Bend receives daily bus service from Portland and other major cities in the Willamette Valley.

Each of the Mt. Hood ski areas provide weekend bus service from Portland. Overnight accommodations and free bus service to Timberline, Mt. Hood Meadows and Multnomah-Ski Bowl are offered at Bowman's Resort, 45 miles west of Portland off U.S. Highway 26. Bus service is also available from the town of Wenatchee with all riders receiving a $1 discount on lift tickets.

Bus service from Salem and other points in the Willamette Valley to the Hoodoo Ski Bowl and Willamette Pass ski areas has been initiated. Transportation service from La Grande and Baker to Anthony Lakes is provided by the Anthony Lakes Ski Club. Operators at Mt. Ashland are exploring possible bus service from Ashland which is 18 miles from the area. There is daily commercial bus service from Portland to Ashland, La Grande and Baker.

FREE - GARAGE SALE signs with your classified ad for a garage sale at your home. Nyssa Gate City Journal.

With the availability of convenient transportation, both that already in existence and that resulting from expanded services, and with record snow depths throughout the state, area operators are promising a better-than-ever ski season in Oregon.
