TIRE CARE TIPS

The salesman was amazed when I told him the exact size and type of new tires I wanted. He thought women only knew when it was time to buy gas. If I had told him that I also knew when to rotate the tires and how to read the tire wear gauge indicator, he would have probably gone into shock. Deciding what type of tire to buy for the car is like deciding what to wear. You won't wear sneakers with a cocktail dress. And you shouldn't mix the types of tires (cross bias, bias belted, radial).

Most manufacturers recommend that you buy the same type of tire that came with the car. However, a reputable dealer will be able to recommend other types such as radials, if your driving routine demands them. The owner's manual is still the best reference source for information on tire buying and care. But there are simple tests you can give the tires periodically.

Such as checking the tires for uneven wear before driving. This will indicate whether the tires are in balance or if you need an alignment job. Every third gas stop, check the tires' air pressure. Kicking the tires is as dependable as thumping a watermelon. Remember, your car rides on only four small patches of rubber in contact with the road, so give them the care they need and deserve.
