DORMANT SPRAYS

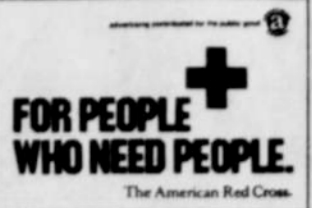

One of the early plant disease and insect control precautions that home gardeners and commercial growers can employ is the use of dormant sprays. These are sprays applied to trees and cane berries before the buds break in the spring. At this time oils, lime, sulfur and other pesticides that normally cause foliage burn can be applied. The dormant sprays are effective against such insects as scale, spider mites and aphids. The primary effect of the pesticide is against the eggs of these pests.

Plant diseases controlled include apple scab, anthracnose, cane blight of trailing berries and others.

Care should be taken to select the right dormant spray for the particular fruit or cane berry variety that you are going to spray. As an example, sulfur used as a dormant spray on apricots can cause damage to the trees. Follow the label instructions on the container of the pesticide that you use and that should keep you out of trouble.

The new owners will repair the building, lay concrete abutments for the heavy machinery and make other changes and improvements before moving their plant into the building.

Like the home of the cliff dwellers, the steep sides of Owyhee Dam will soon be covered with row after row of ladders which will be used by the crew of men that will grout the natural fissures in the structure which were caused by cooling concrete. The ladders will be 30 feet apart and will stretch from the top of the dam to the water level on the outside.

Under the direction of Allen Johannesen, around 20 men are ready to grout. They are building the ladders and mixing the grout on top of the dam. The grout will flow by gravity to pressure pumps which will force it into fissures a distance of 100 feet at a time. Water is being piped to all parts of the dam to counteract pressure of the grout.

It has required two years time to cool the heat caused by chemical action within the concrete.

The Nyssa Pharmacy is being cleaned and kalsomined this week, preparatory to the spring and summer rush of business. Thus do improvements in Nyssa continue to manifest themselves.

Workmen at the H.J. Ward ranch Tuesday found a pleasant surprise awaiting them when they came in for dinner. Mrs. Willard Lynch had prepared a sumptuous chicken dinner with dressing, mashed potatoes and everything, it being Mr. and Mrs. Lynch's first wedding anniversary.

Fire which started about 4 o'clock Monday morning, damaged the Star Hotel in Nyssa to such an extent that it is almost a total loss.

The fire was discovered by George Green, he quickly aroused Mr. Forbes, owner of the hotel and hurried on to give the general alarm. Mr. Forbes awakened the other members of the family, who escaped just in time.

At the fire the fire laddies gave an excellent exhibition of their ability. Water was flowing in a surprisingly short time. It was a gratifying test of the efficiency of both the fire department and the new waterworks system.

The fire originated in the kitchen and is supposed to have been caused by mice gnawing matches, as there had been no fire in the room since early evening.
