It Takes Time

Patrons of the Nyssa School District will be assured to know that progress is being made on rebuilding of the schools destroyed by fire last June.

Now five and a half months later plans are starting to take shape, the insurance settlement should be made soon, and school board members are shooting for a bond election in late January. Whether this date will be met remains to be seen, because there are many ifs to be settled before an election can be held, but time is starting to become important. The administration, school board, parents, teachers, students - all want to be in those new schools when September, 1976 rolls around.

Not that the school board hasn't been time-conscious up to now. They and members of the building committee and budget board have met weekly, sometimes more often, ever since that first meeting before the flames had subsided last June 5.

It takes time to decide what direction they want to go in their new school construction. Time to select architects. Time to decide on building sites. Time to reconstruct plans for the old buildings before an insurance settlement can be made. Time for the insurance adjusters to meet. Time to study what other schools have done, and time to project future needs. And now they are down to actually finalizing the plans and needs and spaces for the buildings, and then it will take more time for the architects to complete the plans and specifications before contractors can bid on them. And this can't happen until a bond issue is passed. Time, time, time.

To those of you who are getting impatient, we can only say that you must be patient a little longer. While all of the above is going on, the administration and faculty have been conducting school, and in remarkably good fashion under trying conditions. We have just finished a winning football season, student morale and accomplishments are high, and everyone seems to be pulling together.

We admire and thank all the many persons who have been meeting and working so hard to provide this district with good schools. After seeing the preliminary plans Monday evening, we think that Nyssa will have schools that everyone can be extremely proud of. All those involved seem insistent that non-essentials be eliminated, but that the essentials are included, to give this community the best schools possible for our students.

Wattwise Home Making Tips

In the last homemaking article we discussed laundry efficiency in knit garments. Before getting into laundering itself, the homemaker should know exactly how to launder each type of knit. Many new washers now have the word "Knits" plainly marked on the control indicating the proper setting for laundering knit garments. There are several types of knit materials, such as:

Synthetic knits - are those commonly called "knits" by today's consumer. They are usually double knits of nylon, polyester, acrylic or triacetate. Therefore, they would have permanent press characteristics.

Delicate knits - are not new, as the name might imply. They have been around for a long time and are not what the average consumer means when the word "Knits" is used. They are usually sheer, single knits used in lingerie, loosely knit specialty items and in some garments labeled "hand-washable."

Wool knits - would include outerwear such as suits, jackets, coats, slacks, dresses, pants suits and the like. Generally these items contain non-washable linings or trims and in most cases require dry cleaning.

Sturdy cotton knits - include shirts, sport shirts, T-shirts, shorts and the like. They should be laundered like any other cotton garment.

Although to some it is common knowledge that knits are washable, many people are not aware of this fact. In general, a normal water setting is in order to provide sufficient water to allow knits to circulate freely providing optimum soil removal and prevent wrinkling and distortion. Wash for 4 - 6 minutes, if heavily soiled, pretreat or soak rather than extending washing time

Contest Ends

(Mayor Concedes)

The final whistle sounded at 9 a.m. November 17 on the Sunday School contest at the Nyssa Conservative Baptist Church. Mayor Larry Bauman, in viewing the remains of a demoralized Patriot team conceded defeat by the Rams. The Rams, coached by Ralph Werner poured it on to the very end and ran up the score as far as possible. Coach Werner was heard to say "an opportunity like this won't come very often and it is so very sweet." The final score was 373 for the Patriots and 459 for the Rams. On the final Sunday, attendance was double that of last year.

A potluck dinner will be held Sunday, November 24 at 1:30 p.m. honoring the winning team. Outstanding players from both sides will be recognized. The Sunday School will provide the main dish and church families will bring salads, desserts and other goodies.

The Sunday School superintendent will also use this occasion for the annual Sunday School appreciation day. A good time is expected by all.

Letters to the Editor

Editor, The Journal, Howdy,

It's getting close to Thanks giving and I thought I'd drop a line. How's everything in the City of Nyssa? I'm doing pretty good here, really enjoy college life at Oregon State University.

Since I'm in Veterinary Medicine I like to promote it all I can. I saw the enclosed article in the OSU Barometer and thought you might use it. I really like the country over here. All the trees and green grass. I've seen a couple of the kids from back home like Tom Church and Letty Rodriguez. Haven't seen Debbie Bratton yet.

Can't wait to get home for awhile. I think the things I miss most are my horses. I'd bring one here, except it costs $65 per month and I can't afford it.

Hope to see my Nyssa friends Thanksgiving. Evelyn Bailey

Donor gives $100,000 to Program

An anonymous donor has given $100,000 to the Oregon State University to support courses leading to a degree in veterinary medicine.

"The gift will materially add to the opportunity for young Oregonians to pursue a career in veterinary medicine," said Dr. E. E. Wedman, head of the Department of Veterinary Medicine. Oregon does not have a veterinary school.

"We would hope to use the gift for self-learning resources if the 1975 Legislature approves and funds a proposal. I think it indicates the public sentiment that exists in Oregon toward providing a reasonable opportunity to the young people of the state to study veterinary medicine," said Wedman.

The measure before the upcoming Legislature would authorize the University to enter a program with Washington State University and the University of Idaho which would offer courses leading to a degree in veterinary medicine. Major facilities would be located at ODU and WSU with faculty provided by all three universities.

If approved by the Legislature, the shared curriculum program would admit 30 students from Oregon each year. In addition to academic work in a hospital-clinic proposed for OSU, students would be trained in two preceptorships in general practice dealing with cattle, horses and small animals and a third one in equine medicine and surgery.

If the proposal is approved by the Legislature, the anonymous gift and other gifts and grants which might be received would be used for instructional equipment, library material and other facilities, said Wedman.
