

Out Of The Past

10 YEARS AGO

Martin Gilbert Greig, 47, 813 Locust Avenue, Nyssa, was killed and Mrs. Jackie Lynn Hagbom, 36, 2012 Brookside Drive, Caldwell, was hospitalized with serious injuries as a result of a collision on North 11th Street at the northwest corner of Nyssa about 10 p.m. Saturday.

Police blame the collision on the excessive rate of speed at which Mrs. Hagbom was driving her car when she approached the turn at the city limits. Unable to negotiate the curve, she went straight on down 11th Street where her 1964 Pontiac collided with the pickup driven by Greig.

The area's cherished dream of a modern swimming pool came close to reality this week as a committee of 19 county and city leaders set to work to provide us with a pool not later than next summer.

Committee working on the project headed by Carl Barclay are Frank Parr, Shorty Brandt, Emil Stunz, Grant Rinehart, Warren Farmer, Dick Maw, Deb Garner, Kayno Saito, Ted Morgan, Jack Schenk, Dick Forbess, Dale Garrison, Hal Henigson, J.R. Winchell, Cliff Main, Shay Bybee, Dick Wilson and Everett Heldt.

The Nyssa-Parma section became a focal point in the culture of Hybrid onions this week, after a five-day study here by several of the world's foremost authorities on the subject.

Heading the delegation was Dr. H.A. Jones, U.S.

Department of Agriculture head horticulturist at Bettsville Md. station, who was the discoverer of the sterile factor in a red onion and has been devoting his work to the breeding and developing of hybrids.

With him were DeLance Franklin, director of the University of Idaho experimental station at Parma, and Dr. Elmo Davis, geneticist at the Parma station.

The three were particularly interested in the work being done by Bill Wahlert in a large-scale breeding operation for the Dessert Seed Co.

Other guests of the Flinders over the weekend included Mr. and Mrs. Ardean Child and girls of Quincy, Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Child of Provo, Utah.

Citizens Are Unexpectedly Pleased

A group of Senior Citizens from the Nyssa area were surprised to find that a Senior Citizens housing complex in Bend was more pleasant than expected.

Twenty-four interested Senior Citizens took a chartered bus last Friday to inspect Greenwood Manor, a complex of apartments erected by Hammond Development Corporation and opened last November in Bend. A similar project is being considered for Nyssa Senior Citizens, but plans are in only the earliest stages of development.

Erma Sparks, a member of the group which traveled to Bend, said that everyone who saw Greenwood was pleased. According to Mrs. Sparks, the complex was unexpectedly attractive. Included in the design of the two-story building are recreation and laundry rooms. There is a couple living there to serve as housekeepers and all utilities, with the exception of telephones, are furnished. Mrs. Sparks said that the Nyssa group talked to Greenwood residents who were very happy with their living situation.

As guests at a buffet dinner Friday evening, the twenty-four Nyssans unanimously agreed that a complex such as Greenwood would be suitable for themselves.

Others who traveled to Bend were Edna McGinnis, Edith Reece, Armitta Bartholomew, Virginia Rookstool, Leona Reeves, Orma Cleaver Art Ellison, Ewen Chard, Carl Simpson, Alma Topliff, Edna Simpson, Ola Chard, Earl Chard, Luella Smith, Hazel Sewright, George Cooper, Pearl Cooper, Nora Snodgrass, Verda Steinke, Fern Orris, Gertie Smith, Bertha Rudelick and Sam McConnell.

Social Scene

Mr. and Mrs. Dehlin Erickson returned home last week after eight days in Hawaii where he attended the National Power and Equipment Dealers Convention in Honolulu.

While in the islands they visited Hawaii and Maui, in addition to Oahu. A visit to the Polynesian Cultural Center was one of the highlights of the trip.

Remember BankAmericard for back-to-school expenses.

First National Bank Teller Annette Hart will be happy to tell you about our BankAmericard program.

Back-to-school means new clothes, books and supplies for students of all ages. And, it can mean a pinch on the family budget sometimes, too. That's when a BankAmericard can come in handy. Because, with BankAmericard, you can buy those back-to-school necessities at many of Nyssa's fine stores. And put them all on one convenient credit card.

Plus, BankAmericard can make managing your money easier, too. You receive an itemized statement each month that shows you exactly how much you spent and where. Then you can write one check to pay for everything...or make convenient monthly payments if you prefer.

BankAmericard. It's the all-purpose credit card that makes back-to-school shopping easy. Stop by the Nyssa branch of First National Bank of Oregon. We'll be glad to help you get your BankAmericard.

We'd like to get to know you.
