Summer Jobs For High School Seniors

Again this year, 30 or more summer jobs in natural resources fields will be available to graduating high school seniors through a program sponsored by the Izak Walton League. The League is offering the program for the 13th straight year in cooperation with the Bureau of Land Management U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and the Forest Service.
 Applicants from all over the nation will be considered for a variety of jobs on federal lands. Last year's high school graduates worked for four to six weeks as fire guards, forestry aides, topographic assistants, and in other conservation-related positions. The same type of jobs will be available again this year.
 Three or more applicants from Oregon will be nominated, according to Robert Mace, selections committee chairman. To be eligible, applicants must be high school seniors who expect to graduate in 1976, at least 18 years old by June 15, in good health, and physically capable of performing field work.
 Applicants must have a good scholastic record and be planning a career in the natural resource fields. Young men and women are equally eligible.
 Interested high school seniors should send applications to R. U. Mace, Selections Committee Chairman, P.O. Box 3503, Portland, Oregon 97208. To insure being considered by the selections committee, candidates should submit applications no later than February 20.
 An application should consist of the following: a completed U.S. Government Form 171 (obtained from any Federal Job Information Center); transcript of high school records; written recommendation from an adult other than a parent; and a letter from the applicant indicating college career plans, extracurricular high school activities, any conservation work performed, and the reasons for seeking employment through the program.

Sailor's Sycamore. As far back as 1800, sailing masters used this tree to locate their anchorage as they came into Santa Barbara, California. These drawings are part of the St. Regis Paper Company exhibit, "Man & Nature." Over half a million people have seen the art in cities where the company has packaging, paper and construction products operations. The company plants about 25 million seedlings a year, some of which may become historic trees of the future.
