Meeting In Portland

The Agri-Business Council of Oregon will hold its annual meeting at Portland's Memorial Coliseum, January 29 in the Pope & Talbot Room. The general session starts at 9 a.m. and concludes with a luncheon at noon. Perry Ellsworth, Executive Vice President of the National Council of Agricultural Employees, Washington, D. C., is the featured speaker. He will discuss factors affecting the supply of farm labor. Joe Klupenger, ABC President, observed that this year's meeting marks the tenth year of progressively closer ties between business and agriculture in Oregon. "The value of agriculture in Oregon will continue to be the central theme in public relations efforts of the Agri-Business Council of Oregon," Klupenger said. The meeting will also include election of 1976 officers and a new slate of directors will be announced.

Workshop Planned

A Food and Meat Handling Workshop has been set up as a result of joint planning by the Oregon State Agricultural Department, Malheur County Extension Service, Malheur County Sanitation Department and Treasure Valley Community College. A community service activity is set for Monday, January 26, at the college's Weese Memorial Building to begin at 7 p.m. The program is an outgrowth of interest expressed in how retail meat handlers, restaurants, bakeries, and school lunch programs might do a better job and might be informed of recently enacted laws governing inspections. The program, at no cost to participants, will include the following: Basic Cleanliness will be presented by Dr. Bill Davidson, Oregon State University Food Technologist, who will among other things present a film package entitled "The Spoilers." He will also touch upon refrigeration as part of his presentation. Representing the Oregon State Department of Agriculture will be Joel Gray and Carrol Farmer who will explain laws governing the handling of meat and what the inspector looks for when he visits a retail outlet or bakery. The third part of the session will be a presentation by Ray Huff, Malheur County Sanitarian, who will explain laws governing the restaurants and school lunch programs as well as bacteriology as it affects the businesses. Growth rates and media in which bacteria grow will also be discussed. For more information, contact the Community Education office at the college.
