Sage of Nu Acres

Instructor Keith Kopp at Parma High Night School, completed his spring piano class for adults Thursday, and the two of us who stayed through to the end received special certificates for "Stick-tiveness".

The other three, the pretty young housewife, the tall, bearded man, and the retired school teacher, dropped out enroute. Lucille Keller and I, having each a genuine love affair with our pianos and rejoicing in our new-found familiarity with the basics of music, pressed on to the end.

Mr. Kopp, a beardless youth at the beginning of our ten or more weeks, aged at least five years in the process. Or was it that the handsome beard he grew made it seem that way? So patient and kind he was, answering our eager questions, repeating things until we understood. He took the facts and theories he had learned the hard way and made them easy for us. You see, he also learned piano as an adult. In college.

We crowned the term with a cake and punch party. Lucille makes a maple chiffon cake that's famous in Parma.

Now both of us will have time to tackle putting in practice all we've learned, doing our scales, in all major keys, and mastering all the pieces in the three piano books.

Understand the drop-outs told Mr. Kopp that the course was worth what it cost even though they weren't able to finish, because they learned so much.
