Mrs. Vern Hirsch Visits Alaska

By Dale Witt

Mrs. Vern Hirsch of Newell Heights left May 14 via plane for Skagway, Alaska, to visit her son, Vern, Jr. She and her husband and family had lived in Juneau, Alaska from 1955 to 1962.

While she was there, Vern had her advise him with the gardening and yard work. Although snapdragons and other flowers are now blooming the ground a foot below is still frozen. She and Vern prepared some bare patches beside the house in the lawn. One large patch ran the length of the house and was about 15 feet wide. They had it raked and ready for seeding the next day. Early the next morning, something excited the dogs in the neighborhood and their barking awakened Mrs. Hirsch. Later she went out to plant grass and there was a set of large tracks which ran the length of the large patch they had prepared. They were bear tracks.

Vern is a Project Engineer for the road which is being built to join a Canadian highway coming from Bennett, B.C.

Skagway is now 800 population but during the gold rush had a population of forty thousand people. The road is being built on the opposite side of the river valley on which the Canadian White Pass Railroad was constructed.

The advance surveying crews are no longer having to be transported by helicopter to work and back. Five and nine-tenths of the railroad is partially completed and can be traveled by four-wheel-drive vehicles. The road is being blasted out of the mountain side. The ravines are filled with rock obtained. At present, the contractor is installing a bridge over a deep canyon caused by water of a small swift stream. The bridge will be Pylon structure and is made of a type of steel where its rust will provide a protective covering and will not require paint. On May 30, Vern took his mother to see the road. It was a clear and sunny day. The last one-fourth mile they walked, it became a very pleasant hike. The snow was melting rapidly and parts of the road carried small streams of water. As they neared the bridge site the road consisted of mainly large rocks which had not yet been crushed by the heavy equipment. The footing for two of the pylons were in place and most of the girders from Japan which had been stored since last summer at Skagway were lying about to be fastened into place. The drilling rig which had been winched across the canyon the day before appeared to have been at work. They attended the graduation exercises May 26 of the
