Your County Agent Says

The Little Fleider - A brand-new one-tower portable center pivot system for small and odd-shaped fields has just been introduced which is designed to irrigate up to 10 acres per set. It is just right for those fields which formerly limited to solid-set, side-roll, hose drag, or volume gun type irrigation. The unit features computer calculated sprinklers for precise water distribution, has a total length of 272 feet with 9-foot crop clearance, and is water-hydraulic propelled. Little Fielder reduces the number of sets for a field so hand labor is drastically reduced. For more information contact the County Extension Office in Ontario.

With perennials, experience and research tells us that most weeds should be in the bud stage for best results. The weed killers that are effective and the higher rates required often mean that the treatment is nonselective -- it kills both crop and weed. This can be tolerated for usually perenials occur in small patches in the fields or along ditches and fence rows.

One of the very good perennial weed killers now available - a relative new comer - is Roundup. It is effective on a variety of hard-to-kill weeds like Canada thistle, whitetop, quackgrass and morning glory. It also kills other vegetation to which it is applied. In other words it has no selectivity such as 2.4-D which gets the broad-leaved plants but doesn't hurt the grass.

It is expensive to buy but when the cost of perennial weed patches is considered along with the fact that perennials continue to spread and render the land useless for crop production, the cost is not prohibitive. A nice feature of this new chemical weed killer is that it does not stick around in the soil to kill subsequent crops. It's a bright spot on the perennial weed control picture. Be sure you read the label carefully and follow the directions if you plan to try some on your favorite perennial weed patch, however.
