"To Walk in Sunshine"

By Beverly Hansen

How many of us are in the habit of listening to news and music heard over the radio? Surely we view television programs and occasionally read the newspaper.

Are we aware of the modern trend toward obscenity and horror as the basic subject material for predominating movies?

Have we allowed ourselves to fall so sound asleep or to become so engulfed in a state of apathy that we are no longer capable of comprehending or evaluating sensibly the writing on the wall—even when it is written in BOLD TYPE?

We are grasping for straws to prevent drowning in the Undercurrent!

Why should we, in the richest and most blessed nation known to civilization, allow ourselves to be pushed so hard against the stone wall with retaliation?

Are we going to allow the Godless monster that is Communism to literally take over without combat?

Communistic ideology is the extreme reverse of goals and ideals set for the improvement and advancement of the individual, which is his or her God-given inheritance!

Many of us have already lost sight of many goals and ideals set for the improvement and advancement of the individual. We are engaged in a frenzy to attempt to keep our heads aboveboard in this new world of overwhelming competitive and emulative pressures!

Ours is a generation of future leaders with staggering potential. What we lack is dynamic directional guidance.

Together

Solitary seclusion is desired by all at times, but who would truly choose to live out his or her life in complete isolation? It is the natural tendency and inclination of all mankind to seek fellowship, comfort, words of encouragement, love, etc., from others of his kind.

Since we wish to be together, we must face the responsibilities which togetherness entails. No two individuals have the same make-up. We all have differing personalities, dreams, hopes, aspirations, talents, etc. If such were not the case, this would indeed be a dull world.

Attitudes of the individual become all-important. We learn from early childhood the endearing values of honesty, unselfishness, forgiveness, kindness, chastity, prayer, faith in God, dependability, love, and the myriad of other good traits. When these traits are weighed against the opposing ones, such as dishonesty, greed, hate, jealousy, covetousness, and their hosts; we should be able to discern clearly the end products produced by following one course or the other. While the latter traits lead to spiritual death, the former always lead to life eternal.

The institution of marriage challenges every facet of our nature. A successful marriage constitutes living together in the closest harmony. All too often we arrive at this point in life with less than mediocre preparation, causing much added stress and tension. Marriage is a give-and-take proposition! If it becomes lop-sided or out of balance to any degree in this area, there is bound to be difficulty.

The following is a good example stating the effects produced due to improper evaluation of a situation:

The wife has dinner prepared. The husband and his wife are seated at the table enjoying the meal. When it is time for dessert, the wife asks the husband to fetch the chocolate pudding from the refrigerator. He states that she, not he, should be the one to see that the pudding is on the table; however he finally relents and gets the pudding. Upon carrying the bowl to the table, he accidentally drops it on the floor. The bowl breaks and splatters pudding over quite a wide area. He then refuses to clean up the mess because he feels he was doing his wife a favor in the first place by going after the pudding. She also refuses to clean it.

The pudding and broken glass remain on the floor for days due to the stubbornness of each. At last the husband compromises by saying he will chip the dry pudding off the floor if she will throw it away.

You can imagine the uncalculated tension and constant reminder every time each viewed the mess. Their thinking and actions were on the level of children, thus showing the immaturity of each to meet some of the simpler adjustments marriage requires.

admire, we try to make the best possible impression. Why not try this same attitude on everyone with whom we come in contact? We might be pleasantly surprised by the effects. It is much more difficult to feel confident and relaxed with a loved one when we have been deceitful, dishonest, argumentative, or displayed other negative traits while with others. Also the mental process of change-over from one character to the other with each contact is very tiring. Our language patterns are all-important, also our sincerity. If we wish to make the most of our most impressive contact, we must use the proper mode of speaking. The pitch of the voice alters the force of reception. Our very thoughts enter into focus here. We can best rectify our thinking habits while alone. Develop the habit of thinking as though you were talking aloud. If your thoughts employ words which would not be pleasant to the ear, throw them out and cease to use them again! This might take some real effort if you have allowed your language patterns to become extremely lax. A chain-smoker can tell you just how difficult it is to suddenly stop smoking. Sometimes it is easier to level off gradually but do make the changes as rapidly as possible. The change in the way you feel about yourself, and the greater admiration others have for you is more than ample reward for the Better You.

The shortest distance between two points always was and always will be a straight line.

Each note of insincerity, improper use of words, seamy words, poor grammar, etc. either breaks the line of communication altogether or at least bends it.

The more we improve our speech, sincerity, honesty, love and understanding for one another, the straighter the line becomes.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our thanks to the many friends and neighbors for the beautiful flowers, cards and personal kindnesses shown us during our recent loss of our mother and grandmother Hutoqua N. Linegar. We also wish to thank the Malheur Nursing Home and Drs. Danford and Kerby for their fine care of her during her long stay there.
