Garden Tips

When the harvest of June-bearing strawberries is finished, the beds should be cleaned up.

That means removing old and dead plant material," says Duane Hatch, Oregon State University Extension home gardening coordinator. The clean-up can be done by hand, or with a rotary mower set at the proper height. (Set the mower so it cuts just above the crown of the plant.) It is important to get rid of rotted and damaged fruits that could become a source of disease.

Once the bed is clean, Hatch advises letting the strawberries go dormant from mid-July to mid-August. Water and fertilize the berry plants in mid-August to ready them for the fruit-setting stage that follows.

June-bearing varieties (Marshall, Northwest, Hood,

Everbearing strawberries do not need to be cleaned-up now.
