SUGAR

One thing I, as an editor, want to stay away from, is sensationalism and negative news. I hope what I say in this column will not be taken as negative reporting.

The Amalgamated Sugar Company has been in Nyssa for forty years and has not missed a campaign and will not miss this year's campaign, although it will be smaller than normal.

As many of you are aware, the sugar market is in very poor condition due primarily to an overabundance of sugar world wide. At present, legislation has been introduced to authorize some government support of the sugar program. However, with cost of production what it is today, this proposed legislation is not enough. The way things stand at this time, the American sugar industry is in danger. Unless something is done, and soon, the possibility exists that Americans could become dependent on others for sugar, just as we are for oil. There is much speculation as to the answer to the problem, however, most people seem to agree that some sort of import quota would be the most effective.

I'm not going to profess to be smart enough to know the answer, but as individuals we should let our Senators and Congressmen know how we feel and that we care, especially in our area where, directly or indirectly, the sugar industry does affect our lives. Write your Congressman or Senator today. I'm going to.

What is It?

After eleven years in the produce business, primarily the selling and handling of onions, can you imagine my surprise when I found out I made a mistake in the identification of onion seed.

Two weeks ago on my way to Ontario in the Cairo Junction area, I spotted a beautiful field of seed onions. Making a mental note of this I returned a couple days later with my camera and shot up a roll of film on this beautiful field. That not being enough I put one of the pictures on the front page with the question, "What is it?" See page six. There I went on to say it was a field of onion seed. Well, my bubble was burst when Harvey Wilmot came in and explained to me it was not a field of onion seed but was LEEK. To Harvey and the Desert Seed Company, I apologize along with all the readers. However, there is some consolation, according to Webster, the Leek is related to the onion so I wasn't completely wrong. From this experience, I also learned that the leek is the floral emblem of Wales.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Journal:
 The dust has finally settled on the 1977 version of the Oregon Legislature. Some good things were accomplished and some bad things slipped by. And many things were left undone.

But throughout the second longest legislative session ever, the people of Eastern Oregon could be justly proud of the job performed by Representative Denny Jones.

Few lawmakers exemplify the ideals of hard work, dedication and common sense that were exhibited by Denny. He was firmly committed to representing the people and to helping them in any way he could.

He made many difficult decisions—decisions that were sometimes contrary to the majority. But he was not afraid to stand up and be counted, and in the face of various pressures, held true to the courage of his convictions.

People may not always agree with the legislature, or individual legislators, but in Denny the people of Eastern Oregon have a lawmaker with integrity and understanding—one with whom I have been proud to be associated this past legislative session.

Sincerely,
 Roger Martin
 Minority Leader
 Oregon House of Representatives.

county wants to give another figure. The county will now ask for a mediator from Oregon Relations Board of Salem to iron out the difference. This part I do not like nor does anyone else that I talk to. We do not want or think it right to have some one come from out of the area to settle our differences. It is too easy for this board to become loaded, packed, and biased for one faction or the other.

When our elected officials cannot come to an agreement on salary for our employees then we think it is time for the tax payers to decide what they think the employees are worth. This would keep everybody honest and everybody on their toes. The ballot could have two questions. No. 1. Do you think our employees should have a raise? No. 2 if so, how much, then specifying the two amounts suggested by the two arbitrating bodies.

This then keeps government down with the people, for the people, and of the people.

Yours truly,
 D.A. Erickson

 Dear Gov. Straub:
 It seems that in all divisions of government we have a problem of solving what wages shall be paid to government employees. This includes cities, counties, states, federal government, and even our national congressmen.

Here in Malheur county we now have a breakdown in negotiations. The employees want one figure and the

Up, Stand Up for Jesus' was then presented by the sanctuary choir. Arlene Seward gave a presentation of charter members and a little information about the Nyssa Church History. Introducing the former pastors were Joe and Irene Hobson with Ronda and Gary Seward presenting the special song. The message then was given by District Superintendent Rev. Hoyle C. Thomas, with the Rev. Vern Martin who pastored during 1936-43, 40 years ago pronouncing the benediction.

Members and friends of the church then provided enough food for 200 people in the fellowship hall. "Everyone visited and enjoyed the fellowship with one another," commented one member.

Church directories were purchased and were given to each member and friend. The directories contain church history, pictures of former pastors, members and friends and telephone numbers and the address of each member and friend.

The surgery involved removal of the socket and ball in his left hip, replacing them with a plastic socket and a stainless steel ball. His surgeon, Dr. William Tregoning, said Evans came through the operation in good shape and within a few days was ahead of schedule in his recovery.

A thorough program of physical therapy was arranged for the governor, involving exercising of the

Evans Doing Well After Surgery

Satisfactory progress is reported in Governor John V. Evans' recovery from hip surgery.

He is reported in good condition in St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise, where the surgery was performed Friday, July 8. Three days later the governor was on his feet, using crutches in walking. He expected to be in the hospital about a week to ten days and thereafter planned to go to his home in Malad for a leg to assure proper operation of the new artificial hip joint.

During his time in the hospital Evans has been in close touch with his Statehouse Office. He has had briefings from state department heads, has signed letters and documents and has kept fully informed of state business.

Members of his staff said his room has been flooded with flowers, cards and letters from Idahoans throughout the state.

The Washington Report

More lives will be lost in traffic accidents and American consumers will have to pay up to $2,000 more over the life of a car if a new Department of Transportation regulation requiring that air bags be installed in new cars is allowed to stand. That is why I am co-sponsoring a bill to repeal the air bag mandate.

Safety claims made by supporters of mandatory air bags are unsubstantiated and the same agency that wants to force this albatross on the American people says that seat belts are far safer than air bags. And seat belts are already in 95 percent of all cars on the road.

Installation of air bags would add between $200 to $250 to the cost of a new car. The real sticker is that it costs far more than that—$300 to $600—to have the air bag replaced, which must be done any time the bag inflates! Air bags have been known to inflate when there has been no accident or impact. As a matter of fact, Department of Transportation data shows that accidental inflations occurred in 7.3 percent of the inflations to date in the air bag test sample.

Even more serious than the financial factors involved, and those could soon amount to $20 billion, are the numbers of human lives that could be lost. Many motorists will stop wearing seat belts with the false belief that air bags will protect them in case of an accident. The truth is that air bags work only in frontal or near-frontal collisions, and then only if the car was traveling at a speed of more than 22 miles per hour. Air bags do not work in accidents that are side impacts, rollovers, multiple impact collisions, or rear collisions—accidents that account for 45 percent of all traffic fatalities. Seat belts work in all of those situations.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has shown that safety belts are 5.5 times better at saving lives and 2.5 times more effective at preventing injury than air bags. But still, the Department of Transportation wants to saddle the American people with another regulation that will cost many lives, while penalizing citizens who already wear protective seat belts.
