

Emma Benedict is pictured making a 10 pin pick-up, with all the strength she has.

WHOOPS, that's not the way it's done, there all supposed to fall down, not make a mess.

JOAN VAN VLIEH shows us her fantastic form.

"RAH" Eris Bertram puts the ball right down the old tube.

Outdoor with PETE HELEY

Editors Note:
Pete Heley and his wife Marlen live in Gresham. Pete writes a predominately fishing column for The Springfield News, The Community Press, The Citizen and the Klamath Falls Herald. He also writes a monthly column for Oregon Outdoors and also writes for the yellow section of Outdoor Life magazine. In addition Pete published The Oregon Angler, a magazine dedicated to fishing in the northwest.

The 1976-77 fur harvest season had another banner year as the total harvest easily exceeded a million dollars. The 1977-78 season will get underway about the middle of the month and there have been some changes.

One change involves the muskrat, which remains Oregon's most important fur-bearer despite an average pelt price of under five dollars. Heavy trapping pressure along the Snake River has resulted in the muskrat season for Malheur County being a month shorter than is the season in the rest of the state.

Oregon Furbearers Support Million Dollar Industry

February 28, instead of during the entire year as in the past. Prices of up to $40 per pelt resulting in increased trapping pressure necessitated the change.

The biggest change this year involves the bobcat. An average pelt price of over $100 per Oregon bobcat is misleading. The lighter colored cats of eastern Oregon brought prices ranging up to almost $400 per pelt. Prices on the darker colored bobcats of western Oregon averaged only about $75.

This year, there will be no season at all on eastern Oregon bobcats and only a three month season will be allowed on the western Oregon cats. Prior to this year, the bobcat enjoyed no closed season. Classified as a predator, it could be taken at any times by any means.

In the November issue of the Oregon Wildlife, the official publication of the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, there is a detailed report of last season's fur harvest. Here is a rundown: beaver - 10,784 pelts brought an average price of $18.04; otter - 439 pelts brought an average of $56.90 mink - 1,328 at an average price of $10.20; muskrat - 55,500 at an average price of $4.38; raccoon - 6,154 at an average price of $20.69; maren - 74 at an average

Bowling the No. 1 Sport

What did I get for my 80c?

The game of bowling can make a person jump up and down with joy, frame by frame, give you a pretty good feeling of success by the end of three games, or, you can come out of the pit area gritting your teeth and saying to yourself, "I hate this game!" Just ask Hank Moody at M & W or Jim Robinson!! But, if you're on a league, you come back through that door the next week bound and determined to do better. Such as, change the mark you used last week follow through with your arm better, grip your ball and keep your outriggers firm, keep your slide foot straight at the foul line and on and on—

It seems like forever before you can finally hit a 200 game so you can get your name upon the board or get a pin to wear. By the time you get to the 10th frame and your heading into that 200 area, you start shaking, you're so excited it's hard to breathe and you just know you're going to miss. But, somehow you manage to get one foot in front of the other and get that ball out for the score. The pins go down and there goes your ball into the 1-3 pocket!! What a feeling of accomplishment. Then you think, oh brother, I have to throw 2 more to complete this 10th frame. So you take a deep breath, somehow make your feet move forward and it's in the pocket again! Then one more time you stagger up there, everyone is watching and you hit your third strike in a row. Wow, I did it!! You get your name announced, go up to the desk for your 200 pin and then go back down and collapse!! There you are, worn out, feeling pretty darned proud knowing you did it before, you can do it again!!

It doesn't matter if you're a beginner or pro, the excitement stays the same. So come on down and join us, it's fun! By Barbara Garner
