NYSSA'S FIRST GRADERS weren't left out when it came to Christmas plays this year. This is just a few of the children in Mrs. Kimi Casad's class who were Santa's little elves. Each first grade class had a part and each child had their place. The children put on the play for their parents Wednesday, December 21 and then put the play on at the Nyssa Nursing Home Friday, December 23.

NYSSA ELEMENTARY students put together a three-act play entitled "Santa and the Spacemen." The First Act involved Kob of Mars Kidnapping Santa Claus. In the Second Act, Santa visited the other planets and in the Third Act the Universal Court met. During the Third Act (which is pictured above) the Universal Court decided Santa could visit all the planets. 120 Nyssa elementary students were involved while the 6th grade choir directed by Gary Welch sang 13 songs. Around 80 parents attended the cast when the students performed their play for the primary students, December 22 and the elementary students, December 23.

Some of the Fruitland children will remember five years back, when Pete Alves came to school dressed as a Dutch Sinterklaas and, with a Dutch exchange student, dressed as a "helper" showed the fourth grade class what a Dutch Christmas was like.

He sat at a table and, out of a big book, talked with the different students on the good and bad things they had done. They did not know the teacher had told him what to write about each in the book!

Visiting the Pete Alves farm over the holidays is Jan Keulen, a student at Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo. Jan, an all-American boy, born of Holland Dutch-American parents, hates California and loves Idaho, and doubtless will, someday, live here.

At the Ben Payne home, Christmas was celebrated with a large dinner. Guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Newell, Kenny Newell, and Mrs. Stella Newell all of Nampa.

Francis Cammann took Mrs. Vesta Wilson with him when he went to Portland to spend Christmas with his son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Cammann. Vesta went on with her son Delbert, for Christmas with him and his family at Molalla.

It was Christmas at home for the Darrell Sutton family, and Skyla's uncle, Keith Armstrong, of Boise, joined them for the celebration.

We had a Christmas eve party at the Dohners, and were joined by the Dave Weavers, Gary Fischers and Debbie and Pam Sheffield. The adults and teens mostly watched the Noah's ark story on television while the younger ones played games.

Christmas night at Christian Life Fellowship, Pastor Jack Becker read the Christmas story from the Bible and later refreshments were served.

Christmas with her eldest son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Elver Nielsen of Sunset Valley. Present were Elvers two sons, and their families. Effie said she had a phone call from her grandson, Tom of Aurora, and learned that the Delbert Wilson family and his mother, Vesta, visited them on Christmas eve.

A bundle of joy and peace mark this blessed event... welcoming the festive New Year!
